Munich Peace Ratified New Friends Approved To Recognize Ethiopia Decree Powers Asked

Daladier Wins
By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 4.—Premier Daladier tonight won overwhelming approval in the Chamber of Deputies for his part in the Munich peace conference and his policy of seeking "renewed or new friendships" with Italy and Germany.

The chamber voted 535 to 75 in Daladier's favor, but a more stringent test for the government was still in store—a vote on cabinet-approved demands for virtually a temporary dictatorship over French economics and finances.

Daladier's ministerial statement on the four-power Munich accord which appeased Germany at Czechoslovakia's territorial expense said France was in a state of "permanent mobilization" to preserve the peace saved at Munich.

To Recognize Ethiopia

Earlier, it was disclosed that the government had decided to resume full relations with Italy by recognizing Premier Mussolini's Ethiopian conquest.

Foreign Minister Bonnet asked Italian Charge d'Affaires Renato Prunas to notify his government that France had decided to name an ambassador to Rome.

The notification was coupled with French thanks for Premier Mussolini's part in solution of the German-Czechoslovak crisis. Italian approval of specific nomination for the post was expected to be asked within 24 hours.

Diplomatic Shifts

Although Francois Pietri, a deputy and member of a half-dozen former cabinets, has been mentioned widely for the appointment, political sources tonight believed that Andre Francois-Poncet, present Ambassador to Berlin, probably would be named.

In such a case, it was said, Francois-Poncet would be succeeded in Berlin by eLon Noel, now Ambassador to Poland, and Noel's post at Warsaw would be taken by Gabriel Puaux, former minister to Austria.

The French notification to Italy indicated France was ready to recognize King Vittorio Emanuele as Emperor of Ethiopia.

Premier Daladier won cabinet approval of a proposed bill to grant h midecree powers to deal with the financial situation arising from the recent war scare, and then planned to rush it through Parliament. These efforts were blocked temporarily tonight when the Senate adjuorned until tomorrow morning while the premier was explaining the bill before the chamber's finance committee.

The premier, from the rostrum of the Lower House, summarized his government's goal as the maintenance of peace by strengthening the nation and by a general solution of European problems.

"We maintain peace only if we elaborate finally the bases of general settlement, if we organize Europe and the world on new principles, and if after having avoided war in Central Europe we make it

Britain Opens Parley With Italy on Spain

Baldwin for Chamberlain Defends Munich Pact General Election Urged

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 4.—Great Britain aimed at permanent European appeasement today as Prime Minister Chamberlain won powerful support for his bitterly attacked Munich accord which carved up Czechoslovakia.

Britain began friendship negotiations with Italy through her ambassador in Rome, the Earl of Perth.

The negotiations were designed to better Anglo-Italian relations through some settlement of the irksome Spanish question, thus putting into effect the Easter friendship pact between Italy and Britain—a pact whose operation is contingent upon such a settlement in Spain.

Britain's efforts to get foreigners out of Spain are tied up closely with efforts to reach an agreement with Mussolini as a preliminary to discussions looking toward a four-power pact projected to link Germany, Italy, France and Britain.

Semi-official quarters had renewed hope that Il Duce would be persuaded to withdraw his legionnaires from Spain and even possibly that a Spanish armistice could be arranged.

Chamberlain announced tonight the present extraordinary session

Syrovy Stays at Helm 4 Slovaks Get Posts Press Spurns France Strong Friends Asked

Slovaks Impatient
By the United Press.

Prague, Oct. 4.—Czechoslovakia tonight established a new government of "concentrated power" under Premier Gen. Syrovy to direct the rehabilitation of the dismembered republic.

The revised cabinet includes three army generals and contains only 14 ministers as compared with 18 in the Syrovy "crisis government" which was in power less than two weeks. Its formation was announced by President Benes.

An indication of the foreign policy the government may follow was seen in a front-page editorial of the important liberal newspaper, Lidove Noviny, which said that the future of Czechoslovakia is linked with the future of Germany.

"Goodby France"

The editorial, entitled "Goodby France," stressed the strength of Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

"Central Europe no longer exists," the newspaper said. "What comes next? War between Germany and France or between Germany and Russia? Or an alliance of Germany and Russia with a dividing up of the British Empire?

"We have played the role of policeman long enough. We have been deserted. The world is governed by force, not law, therefore our place must be alongside that of force.

"There is nothing [illegible] for us except to get along [illegible] Germany. Even in commercial relations we must refrain from any combinations which would align us against Germany.

"Must Recognize Power"

"We must recognize Hitler and Mussolini as being more powerful than France which at present is menaced on three sides—Germany, Italy and Spain.

"Hitler is winning one struggle after another without fighting, according to the formula of his 'Mein Kampf.'"

The new government includes one Ruthenian and four Slovaks and conforms with President Benes' desire for a stronger regime of national concentration. The former Syrovy government had only one Slovak.

Autonomy for Slovaks

It was reported simultaneously that an agreement was "in sight" on the autonomy demands of the nation's 3,000,000 Slovaks.

Syrovy, one-eyed World War hero and inspector general of the army, was in conference with President Benes throughout most of the day.

The newspaper Azet had said earlier that a complete settlement of the Slovak autonomy question would have to be reached before the new government was announced.

There were increasing reports that the "New Czechoslovakia" is ready to break away from France and enter into close collaboration with Germany and Italy.

The new cabinet includes:

White House Sees Trade Retarded by Name Calling

Hits Industry, Labor Parallel to Europe Bogey Talk Scored Arms Parley Hinted

Clear Track Indicated
By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 4.—President Roosevelt was said on high authority today to believe that business would have a clear track toward better times if industry and labor substituted friendly conferences for name-calling and recrimination.

Whether disclosure of this opinion meant that the President was preparing to act toward industrial peace was not announced. The mere statement of his sentiments was conveyed without comment to newspapermen at the temporary White House here.

At his press conference the President himself had no statement to make regarding business.

Those who spoke authoritatively regarding Mr. Roosevelt's attitude suggested that bitterness in the domestic economic scene parallels that of the recent European crisis.

The war-like gestures of European nations, they said, find their analogy in what they described as frightening statements, misrepresentation of Government policy for partisan political purposes, too gloomy predictions of the future and the raising of bogies to scare the people.

Parley Interest Hinted

Friends of Mr. Roosevelt said that the sooner labor and industry sat around the conference table and stopped hurling names at each other, the sooner the Nation would see business make real progress.

The President had no comment on the recent European settlement.

Responding to a press conference question as to whether the United States would initiate a program to bring about world [illegible]rmament, Mr. Roosevelt sugge[illegible]t reporters read the reco[illegible] [illegible]ministration's foreign [illegible] the last five years.

In that period there have been indications the Government was ready and willing to talk over international problems with other nations.

Mr. Roosevelt said the record of things the Government has done and of statements he and Secretary Hull have made was perfectly clear. He urged newsmen not to try to elaborate on the English language contained in the record.

U. S. Policy Misrepresented

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, in a speech last night, suggested world-wide armament reduction, a prohibition against bombing of civilian populations and an international accord for economic rehabilitation.

The same sources responsible for disclosing Mr. Roosevelt's opinion on industrial peace and its relation to betterment of business cited several examples of what they considered misrepresentations of Government policy. These included:

Efforts to make it appear the Government planned to set up agencies similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority all over the country.

Contentions that it is impossible to raise money for new developments by privately owned utility plants.

Assertions that the Federal tax burden now is heavier than it was

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—A city cocksure of its Cubs in the face of the longest odds ever quoted against a World Series contender is set for the impact tomorrow when New York's Yankees parade their might on Wrigley Field.

Into the World Series coffers Chicago fans, still in the grip of pennant hysteria, have already poured $695,000 in a seat-buying frenzy. All but deifying their darlings in an outpouring of adulation that followed the Cubs National League pennant triumph, Chicago citizens have set up a vigorous chant of "Bring on the Yankees."

But despite Chicago's daffiness over the Cubs and its blithe disregard of Yankee prowess, the Cubs will take the field for the opening game as pronounced underdogs. In the coldly commercial eyes of the betting commissioners, the National League is a 5-to-3 shot to win the opener and a 3-to-1 shot to win the series against Yankee pitching and Yankee power.

Cub hopes will ride today with a tall, loose-jointed righthander, Chi-

Reorganization Cure for Jam, Says President

Admits Work Pile-Up Blames Duplication Urges Red Cross Giving

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Government reorganization, beaten in the last session of Congress, was put forward by President Roosevelt today as a remedy for the work jam which he said existed in some Washington agencies.

At his press conference, the President said some Governmental agencies were behind in their work and some employes were piling up excessive overtime. He made this statement after being told of reports some employes were considering striking to protest the overtime work required.

The problem, he said, was for Congress to solve, since Congress decided what functions the administrative branch should undertake and how many persons should be assigned to carry out these functions.

Mr. Roosevelt said a Government reorganization bill would go far to remedy the present situation because it would eliminate duplication of effort and would enable more work to be done for the money now being spent.

Congress, he added, had three other paths—let the situation drift, eliminate some Governmental functions, or provide more personnel.

Born in Washington, October 18, 1853, Mr. Blagden was educated in public schools here. While here he lived on the family estate, Argyle, which was situated at what is now the intersection of Eighteenth and Varnum streets northwest.

Land for Rock Creek Park was donated by the Bladgen estate.

Jailor's Romantic Daughter Frees 2 Bandits; Lands in Cell

By the United Press.

Lexington, N. C., Oct. 4.—T. C. Kimel resigned tonight as jailer of the county jail after locking up Lula Belle, his husky blonde 22-year-old daughter, who released two handsome young prisoners because she did not want the one she loved to die in the State's lethal gas chamber.

"I am humiliated and grieved beyond control and have locked up my own daughter in jail in order that justice might find its course," Kimel wrote Sheriff Raymond Bowers after Lulu, 175-pound blonde, handed the jail keys to James Godwin, 19, and Bill Wilson, 21.

A murder warrant was issued tonight against Godwin, charging him with slaying Donald Moss, High Point, N. C., who was fatally shot when he resisted attempts of a holdup man to commander his automobile.

At the same time Lula Belle, who released the two men while acting as turnkey when Kimel left town on a business trip yesterday afternoon, was formally charged with aiding and abetting in the escape. Preliminary hearing was set for Wednesday night in recorder's court here.

Godwin, object of Miss Kimel's affections, and Wilson remained hidden all of today, although they were subjects of a State-wide search by officers who believed they were responsible for a series of robberies and a slaying shortly after they fled from jail in a stolen taxicab.

Godwin was awaiting trial on charges of first degree burglary and if convicted could be sentenced to death by lethal gas. In addition, he now faces the murder charge.

County authorities said they had

U.S. Sets Up 665-Million Gold Cushion

Ready for Foreigners Sent Here in Crisis Outflow Expected In Effect, 'Sterilized'

The Treasury revealed yesterday that, at the beginning of this month it had a fund of $664,997,733 in gold to serve as a cushion against possible withdrawal by foreigners of part of the flood of frightened money sent here in the recent war scare.

This amount of gold, the Treasury daily statement disclosed, is unobligated and thus available for export if the backflow of money should be so great as to reverse the balance of payments against the United States to this extent.

Held for Foreigners

The fund consists of gold which, in effect, is sterilized. That is, the Treasury has bought the gold with available cash and holds it in the general fund without attempting to issue gold certificates against it to the Federal Reserve banks. The latter process would add the dollar value of the gold to the checking account with the Reserve banks on which the Treasury draws to meet Government expenditures.

Expenditure of the dollar value of the gold would add the money to the idle funds of banks. By holding the gold in the general fund, the Treasury keeps it out of idle bank funds. In consequence, foreigners could withdraw all the gold in the cushion without tightening of bank credit.

The Treasury, up to October 1, however, had issued $281,500,000 in certificates to the Reserve banks against recently acquired gold, which in September reached an all-time high of $623,878,590. The effect was to reduce the "kitty" by the amount of certificates issued, but it is still regarded as ample.

Disclosure Stops Guessing

Until October 1, the exact amount of the reserve fund was not shown in the Treasury statement. The only figure given was the total gold in the general fund, which includes $142,112,009 of remaining "profit" from devaluation of the dollar in 1934. This profit residue is obligated against industrial loans by Federal Reserve banks.

Officials decided, however, that the actual amount of the gold cushion should be shown in the statement in order to banish confusion as to what the figure was. As a result, the statement will show the amount henceforth. The figure may vary from day to day, but it has been kept relatively stable for several days now.

Baltimore Boy Admits Taking Tibbetts' Jewels

San Francisco, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation tonight announced that Meyer Sopher, 23-year-old mess boy from Baltimore aboard the S. S. Monterey, had admitted theft of jewels valued at $50,000 from Lawrence Tibbett, opera singer, and his socialite wife.

Federal agents boarded the boat at San Pedro yesterday after Tibbetts reported the theft while traveling to the mainland from Hawaii.

Nat L. Peiper, agent in charge, announced that $20,000 worth of the stolen jewels had been found.

United States Commissioner E. E. Wiliams set bail at $10,000 and remanded Sopher into the custody of the United States marshal for a hearing Thursday. The specific charge was theft of jewels valued to the extent of $50,000.

Peiper said he had no definite information as to what had become of the remainder of the jewels.

Jurists Ask 13 New U.S. Judgeships

Conference Reports Seek Budget Control Adopt 'Proctor' Plan 15 Vacancies Now

By William V. Nessly.

Recommendations for creation of four additional circuit court and nine more Federal district court judgeships came yesterday from the Judicial Conference, composed of senior circuit judges of the country, presided over by Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes.

At the same time it was disclosed that the conference had called for considerable revision of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings' proposal for establishment of an administrative office for control of the budget and other administrative of the Federal court system.

The proposals for additional judgeships, contained in Chief Justice Hughes' report of the three-day meeting of the conference, came at a time when there already are 15 bench vacancies, unfilled by President Roosevelt despite Congressional authorization, and large accumulations of cases in some of the circuit and district courts. The new judicial positions would be in addition to 17 created at the last session of Congress, most of which remain unfilled.

Committee Named

On the proposed administrative office for the courts, a plan which recalls President Roosevelt's plan for a "proctor" whose duties would include recommendations as to the assignments of judges, the conference named a committee to work out a plan, subject to approval of the conference, "having in view the incorporation of the provisions of the present bill looking to the transfer of the budget from the Departmentof Justice to the administration of the courts by some proper means, and, likewise, embracing a provision looking toward the establishmentof judicial councils or some other like method within the several circuits and the District of Columbia for the control and administration of justice therein."

The judicial councils apparently would take the place of the director of the administrative office provided for in the Attorney General's plan, which died in the Senate at the last session of Congress.

The committee's work is to be done in collaboration with the Attorney General, and the group "is also authorized to submit any recom-

Rome, Oct. 4 (AP).—Arturo Toscanini, symphony conductor whose passport reportedly had been taken up by Italian authorities, was said by a member of his household to have departed tonight for France to sail on the liner Normandie for the United States tomorrow.

[The United Press reported from Domodossola, Italy, that Toscanini had crossed the frontier, accompanied by his wife.—Editor's note.]

Earlier an official had asserted that as far as the Fascist government was concerned, the maestro would be able to conduct scheduled concerts in the United States.

The reports recalled that in 1931 Toscanini had refused to conduct musicians playing the Fascist anthem.

Story of China Arming Apes Just Tokyo 'Monkey-Business'

By the United Press.

Shanghai, Oct. 4.—Reports that the Chinese had armed a band of fierce orang-outangs and taught them to chew up the Japanese, tonight turned out to be just a lot of newspaper monkey-business.

The report started in a Tokyo newspaper. Its correspondent in China reported that fierce Miao tribesmen from the interior of China had joined Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's army.

The Japanese character for Miao, which means "wild men," is the same as the character for the Malayan "orang-utan," which also means wild men, but is more frequently applied to Borneo apes.

The translater elaborated on the idea of Chinese training jungle apes as a new "horror" touch. He explained how apes had been taught to use machineguns.

By the time this story reached Shanghai it had acquired other lurid details. The Chinese newspaper correspondents, instead of denying the report, said it was quite true. They added that the monkeys were under the command of Moj Fang, the governor of Kokonor Province.

Each ape, the Chinese report said, was trained to carry four hand grenades. They were so fast afoot that they could dodge machine-gun bullets. When they got to close quarters with the Japanese they "gouged out the enemy's eyes."

A human officer guided each platoon, the Chinese said, and kept the apes under strict discipline by the simple expedient of giving each ape a tin cup and throwing a dime into it for each Jaanese killed.

Bid for Peace Up to CIO, Says Green

Snubs Roosevelt Plea
Wants Concrete Plan
Sees Rift Deepening

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 4.—The American Federation of Labor is waiting for the C. I. O. to make the first overtures in any peace movement, William Green said tonight after President Roosevelt had addressed a message to the A. F. of L. convention urging American labor harmony.

"There isn't any immediate prospect of the American Federation of Labor making peace with the C. I. O.," Green said after the President's message had been read to the convention.

Waits for Suggestion

"We are in the position of waiting for suggestions from representatives of the C. I. O.," Green said. "We negotiated an agreement, but it was vetoed by John L. Lewis, so there is nothing for us to do but wait for a response from the C. I. O."

he president of the A. F. of L. said if any concrete suggestion toward mediation of the labor dispute is made by President Roosevelt it would be submitted immediately to the executive council of the A. F. of L.

"We accept his message today as merely an expression of hope that peace can be made and as such his message was read to the convention," Green said. "I do not expect to reply to it."

Green interpreted the message as being addressed to "both sides" and added that the A. F. of L. was willing to resume peace negotiations.

As recently as last August, Green said, Lewis rejected proposals that peace talks be started where they were left off last December. A committee from the International Ladies Garment Workers Union talked to Green and Lewis to sound out the prospects for reunion of the Warring factions.

Sees Breach Widening

Referring to reports the C. I. O. was planning to meet in November and adopt a permanent constitution, Green said:

"I am afraid the other side will push the door almost closed when they set up a permanent organization."

He said he believed the executive council of the A. F. of L. would react "favorably" to a definite proposal from Mr. Roosevelt to serve as mediator for labor's embattled factions.

Green charged the United Mine Workers had tried to break up organization meetings of the Progressive Miners of America, a federation unit chartered in May, and followed with this assertion:

"We are going to continue to support the fight to bring the mine workers freedom and independence," Green said.

Once Miners' Leader

He recalled that for years he served the U. M. W. as secretary before he became president of the American Federation of Labor.

"Now I am going to serve them still—to free them from the semi-bondage in which they now find themselves so they can elect their representatives instead of having them imposed upon them."

"Come what may," he roared, "we are going on and on until we win this fight for the miners of America."

President Roosevelt said in his appeal he had close friendship with officers of the American Federation of Labor and the international unions it represents for more than 25 years and "because of this, I venture to express the hope that the convention will leave open every possible door of access to peace and progress in the affairs of organized labor in the United States."

He said if leaders of organized labor can make and keep peace between the various factions "it will vastly increase the prestige of labor with the country and prevent the reaction which otherwise is bound to injure the workers themselves."

Cites Commission Report

Mr. Roosevelt asked labor and industrial leaders to read the report on relations between employers and employes of England and Sweden brought back from Europe in the summer by a special Presidential commission.

"The outstanding feature of this report is that in both these countries co-operation, compromise and labor peace seem to be the rule rather than the exception," President Roosevelt's message said.

The convention had just heard Robert J. Watt, the federation's delegate to the International Labor Office, who represented the federation on the Presidential commission, report:

"Militant trade unionism is demonstrated at the conference table rather than on the picket line in these two European countries."

Watt said the commission had not been instructed to seek any formula for use in the United States.

Attack on the RFC

The resolutions committee had before it approximately 100 resolutions, among them one sharply criticizing the officers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for assertedly lending money to employers paying below standard wages.

The resolution, offered by the Brotherhood of Operative Potters, proposed that the American Federation of Labor officers either ask for the removal of the RFC officials or seek legislation "which will prevent chiseling exploiters of labor."

Informed officials said the resolution was aimed at the pottery industry.

Another resolution, it was reported, asked the convention to instruct federation officers to oppose Senate confirmation of Donald Wakefield Smith's reappointment to the National Labor Relations Board.

Inclusion of the resolution against Smith appeared to confirm advance indications that the whole question of the labor board's administration of the Wagner labor relations act would be the principal issue at the federation meeting.

The Gallup Poll

High Vote of Confidence Given

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Oct. 4.—Are the newspapers fair to the Roosevelt administration?

Although the President has on several occasions criticized the press for the way it reports Washington affairs, an overwhelming majority of newspaper readers in a national survey think the press is fair and impartial to the Administration in its news columns.

GALLUP.

The survey took the issue to a cross-section of newspaper readers in all parts of the country and of all shades of political opinion. Asked whether the news reports in their papers were fair or unfair to the Administration, they voted:

|---|---|
| Unfair | 18 |

This vote of confidence in the impartiality of news reports is the more striking because a majority of American papers lean editorially to the Republican side. In 1936, for example, more than six out of every ten newspaper readers told the Institute that the papers they read were supporting London.

Despite the Republican complexion of the press, today's survery finds that a large majority of Democrats think news reports on the New Deal are fair. For the country as a whole, 72 out of every 100 Democrats believe the press is fair to Roosevelt and 90 out of every 100 Republicans hold the same view.

Sectional Differences

Sentiment regarding newspaper treatment of the New Deal varies slightly according to greographical sections. In the East Central area, which includes Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, and in the Far West, the majorities saying the press is fair are somewhat lower than elsewhere.

| | Fair | Unfair |
|---|---|---|
| New England | 87% | 13% |
| Middle Atlantic | 83 | 17 |
| East Central | 77 | 23 |
| West Central | 84 | 16 |

Roosevelt's Message to A.F. of L.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 4 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's message today to the fifty-eighth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor:

My dear President Green:

Will you be good enough to extend my warm greetings to those who attend the fifty-eighth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor? I wish much that I could accept your very kind invitation to the convention but in these critical days Houston is, for me, a little too far from Washington.

During your lifetime and mine a vast improvement in the conditions of labor and the pay of labor in many occupations in most parts of the country has been brought about. This has come about largely through the efforts of organized labor. But much still remains to be done.

Collective bargaining is one of the most useful devices for fair and constructive human relations and collective bargaining in the industrial field presupposes some kind of organization of employes to conduct their part of such bargaining.

I hope you will give attention to the matter which I am always concerned about, namely, finding ways for steady employment of labor and increasing the annual purchasing power. It is what a worker earns for himself and his family in the course of a year which is important, not only for his own economic plan for his life, but for the economic life of the Nation. In many sections and in many occupations which fall under the general classification of labor, there are millions of Americans who suffer from inadequate pay or over-long hours, or both.

Because for more than a quarter of a century I have had so many associations and friendships with officers of the American Federation of Labor and of the international unions which it represents, I venture to express the hope that the convention will leave open every possible door of access to peace and progress in the affairs of organized labor in the United States.

If leaders of organized labor can make and keep the peace between various opinions and factions within the labor group itself, it will vastly increase the prestige of labor with the country and prevent the reaction which otherwise is bound to injure the workers themselves.

I commend to all representatives of labor and management the reading of the report on relations between employers and employes in England and in Sweden, which has been made by a number of prominent Americans during the past summer. The outstanding feature of this report is that in both countries co-operation, compromise and labor peace seem to be the rule rather than the exception.

I hope the federation will have a highly successful convention and that you will ever keep before you the American ideals of greater social and economic security.

Very sincerely yours,

Rail Heads, Unions Split on Wage Figures

Mediation Hearing Held
U. S. Income Drop Cited
Pay Called Out of Line

By Sidney Olson.

Trotting out vast charts and piles of graphs, statisticians for both railroad management and rail workers waged a battle of figures yesterday as the struggle over the proposed 15 per cent wage cut neared its deadline.

The President's emergency fact-finding board—last remaining mediation barrier before declaration of a National strike by nearly 1,000,000 rail workers—heard each side's experts draw different conclusions from the same statistics.

High Wages Cited

J. Elmer Monroe, expert for the railroads, testified that wages and earning power of workers are now at an all-time high. He was supported in this contention by Dr. Willford I. King, professor of economics at New York University, who made a lengthy series of comparisons between railroad wages and those of other industries, as well as with the Nation as a whole.

Monroe said that the average railroad worker earned $1,785 last year, quoting the rail retirement board as his authority.

Charles M. Hay, counsel for the railroad brotherhoods, denied this statement's accuracy, arguing that the base for deductions was too narrow and declared that the same study showed average earnings of $1,115.

Monroe answered that the latter figure came from the inclusion of thousands of casual and part-time workers who were not actually "railroad men" in the statistics. Hay retorted that all rail workers are involved in the dispute.

Monroe continued by asesrting that the average pay per hour for rail workers reached 75.9 cents per hour in the first half of this year and compared that figure with the average hourly wage of 27.5 cents in 1916, 66.6 in 1920 and 62.6 in 1933.

Dividend Drop Related

He concluded by saying that in the same period investments returns dropped from 5.9 per cent in 1916, to 2.81 in 1921, 1.24 per cent in 1932 and about .67 in the first half of this year.

Hay replied that these returns were based on book value rather than on the actual investment.

Dr. King, asking the board to consider living costs as well as wages in dollars, said that the real wages of rail workers, measured in purchasing power, were 37 per cent higher now than in 1929 on an hourly basis and 26 per cent higher on a weekly basis.

He said that the average earning of all workers in the United States amounted to $1,451 in 1929 and would be $1,252 this year, a decline of 14 per cent. Rail workers, he asserted, averaged $1,672 in 1929 and would average $1,760 on the present basis, a gain of 5 per cent.

Earnings Disparate

Mr. King said:

"The cost of living has gone down 16 per cent. Average weekly earnings of male wage earners in the 25 principal industries have gone down from $30.64 to $24.59. Average weekly earnings of all wage earners in all manufacturing industries have gone down from $27.73 to $22.24.

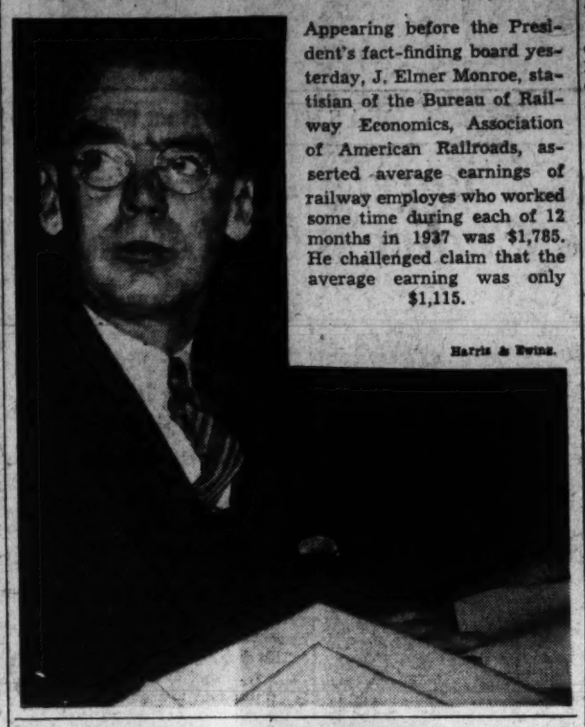

"Average weekly income per farm has gone down from $21.61 to $15.50. Weekly national income per capita has gone down from $12.39 to $9.42.

"Railway operating revenues have gone down from $3,031,000,000 to $1,636,000,000. Net railway operating income has gone down from $552,000,000 to $70,000,000. Net income after payment of fixed charges has disappeared.

"Meanwhile in the face of this almost universal trend downward, the average weekly earnings of railway employees went up from $32.16 to $33.73."

On this satistical basis Dr. King predicted "bankruptcy" of the industry as possible "unless the situation is remedied."

Harris & Ewing.

Appearing before the President's fact-finding board yesterday, J. Elmer Monroe, statisian of the Bureau of Railway Economics, Association of American Railroads, asserted average earnings of railway employes who worked some time during each of 12 months in 1937 was $1,785. He challenged claim that the average earning was only $1,115.

Berry Hits 'Dictatorship's Trend'
George Reports $50,000 Expenditure

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 3.—Striking at "an obvious trend toward dictatorship in our country," Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, last night assailed the Federal Administration in a statement given out here.

BERRY.

"I cannot become enthused over the prospects of a candidate or a group of candidates for public office who predicate their candidacies upon the proposition of continuing an order that I firmly believe to be destructive to the Republic of the United States and, to the end that I may not be misunderstood, I refer specifically to the Administration of the Federal Government," Berry declared.

Berry was defeated for renomination last August by A. Tom Stewart, of Winchester.

Berry said he was "most concerned of course about America because there is an obvious trend toward dictatorship in our country. The wasteful expenditures of money, the continued deficits of the Federal Government, the reduction in income and the stupendous and, almost, insurmountable public debt are things that can't live in a tranquil atmosphere."

Vandenberg will be heard from Sioux Falls from 9:30 to 10 p. m. (E. S. T.) The Wichita address will be broadcast from 9 to 9:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) Both are expected to deal with agriculture under the New Deal.

Vandenberg next will speak at Columbus, Ohio, October 29. This address will be from 9 to 9:30 p. m. (E. S. T.). He will then speak at Newark, N. J., November 2, before a mass meeting and over Mutual Broadcasting System.

Andrews Asks For Patience on Wage Law Rulings

By the Associated Press.

Elmer F. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, appealed to industry yesterday to be patient if requests for interpretations of the wage-hour law are not answered promptly.

"With a congressional appropriation insufficient for minimum administrative needs," Andrews said in a statement, "with a staff far from adequate, and with many problems of organization yet to be worked out, the wage and hour division finds it physically impossible at this time to answer the hundreds of letters requesting interpretations of the law."

Andrews announced the stablishment of 12 regional offices and said he hoped that some would be in operation by October 24, when the law becomes effective.

District Wars On Marihuana In Schools

Public Aid Sought Pine Acts Quickly To Nip Evil in Bud

Sale of marihuana cigarettes to Washington school children was ordered investigated immediately yesterday by District Attorney Pine so that "if this evil is springing up here it can be destroyed before it gains a foothold."

Assistant District Attorney Carusi was directed to launch a thorough inquiry, in co-operation with the Metropolitan Police and the narcotics bureau, to determine the true situation. Grand jury action was planned if evidence supported reports of marihuana and liquor sales in the neighborhood of schools.

The matter was brought to the attention of the authorities publicly at a citizens' meeting on the previous night.

"This office has consistently made vigorous prosecution of 'reefer' and marihuana cases," Pine said. "Naturally we are concerned by any suggestion that this traffic is reaching out toward the children.

"Welcome Information"

"We shall welcome the information of any witness who feels that he knows anything and, with the help of the police and the narcotics bureau, we shall run down promptly any leads that may be supplied. If any citizen comes with any information he wishes to give about the marihuana traffic we shall present the evidence to the grand jury, or, if it requires further investigation, we shall refer it to the police for thorough inquiry. Mr. Carusi is going to go into the whole situation and report his findings to me."

Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, meantime, said any grand jury investigation would have the co-operation of his aides.

Police Open Investigation

"This is a matter for the police and the grand jury," Ballou said. "It is not up to the school authorities. If any of the school people has any information about such a practice he ought to go to the grand jury and tell what he knows. I have no knowledge or suspicion that such sales are being made and none has been reported to me; however, I am confident that the matter will be dealt with by the authorities."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, said he knew nothing of marihuana sales "except what I read in The Washington Post this morning. However, at the pistol range today I asked Capt. Lloyd Kelley about it and he said he was investigating the reports."

"This is the first time I ever heard of marihuana being sold in the Eighth Precinct," Capt. Kelley declared. "I am looking into it."

A complaint that marihuana had been sold to school children was voiced by a woman member at a meeting of the Forest Hills Citizens Association, in this precinct, Monday night. The matter was referred to the association's police committee, headed by Maj. C. M. Exley, 3613 Cumberland street northwest. Maj. Exley said last night that he had no comment to make on the matter and that he deplored the matter having been made public. Should any information be uncovered by his committee, he said, he would make a report.

"Most commendable," commented the Forest Hills association's president, Mrs. Leslie Wright, 4620 Thirtieth street northwest, when she was informed of the inquiry to be made by Assistant District Attorney Carusi. "I think this illustrates splendidly the high caliber of the officials of the District government. Mr. Pine is right on the job."

Calls Report Exaggerated

Mrs. Wright explained that reports of her having said that a woman member of the association had seen school children under the effect of marihuana were exaggerated. "It was a liquor complaint, made a couple of years ago," she said.

"I do not think that we have any marihuana situation in Chevy Chase, Mrs. Wright added. "We have never had a complaint until the one Monday night.

"However, if there have been reports of such sales to school children in Washington, I certainly think they should be looked into, because it is one of the greatest menaces to our children in America today. It is a terrible thing.

"Yet it is reassuring to see the police and Mr. Pine bring all the machinery of the law into action when such a thing is suggested, and if there should be any basis for the reports I am confident that the situation will be dealt with effectively."

CIO Reinstates Ousted Heads, Heals Breach in Auto Union

Lewis Offers Olive Branch to Rebels Action Taken Without Effort to Fix Blame He Sees Lasting Harmony Achieved

The high command of the Committee for Industrial Organization, striving to mend the split which threatened the existence of one of its biggest new unions, yesterday ordered reinstatement of four expelled officers in the United Automobile Workers of America.

C. I. O. Vice Chairmen Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, serving as arbiters of the dispute between the four expeled officers and U. A. W.'s president, Homer Martin, carefully avoided xing blame for the controversy, but suggested immediate reinstatement, without compensation for time lost, of Vice Presidents Richard Frankensteen, Wyndham Mortimer and Ed Hall, and Secretary-Treasurer George Addes.

Lewis Foresees Peace

Hillman and Murray said in a statement:

"It is imperative that the conflict and turmoil which has beset the international union and its locals must come to an end."

C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis predicted after the accord had been approved by the board that "complete elimination of all internal controversy" in the U. A. W. would result.

Martin convened the union's full executive board for the first time in months, since charges of communism brought about the expulsions, but declined comment.

Lewis called on the four expelled officials at their hotel here and asked them to join the other board members. He then addressed both factions on the need for unity in future action and expressed a hope for harmony.

Hillman and Murray in their decision suggested that the U. A. W. board immediately adopt rules outlining the responsibilities and duties of officers in clear language. They noted that the "phenomenal growth" of the union—from 30,000 to more than 400,000 members in less than two years—had been instrumental in causing the schism by its very rapidity.

They struck at the divided authority which led in some cases to "unjustified stoppages of production in violation of outstanding collective bargaining agreements," and then suggested the assignment of specific responsibilities.

The board, which had informally approved the finding before its formal session, later passed on to organization jurisdiction problems, particularly the determination of wage levels in new contracts.

Sewer Grant to End Little Falls Branch River Pollution

Elimination of pollution in Little Falls Branch, emptying into the Potomac River near the District line, was promised yesterday with announcement that $18,774 hda been granted the Washington-Baltimore Sanitary Commission for construction of a sewer to complete a system connecting parts of half a dozen Montgomery County communities with the District system.

The project will cost $41,719 to construct 1,084 feet of 36-inch pipe, running into the District sewer system at the District line near Conduit road. This sewer will connect with a second, to be constructed under an earlier PWA grant, which will serve homes in southwest Chevy Chase, south Bethesda, Edgemoor, Bradley Hills and the southern part of Battery Park.

Cost of the system will be $80,000.

J. W. De Kay, Author, Dies in Takoma Park

Wrote Twenty Books Made Fortune in Oil Did Play for Bernhardt

John Wesley De Kay, author, playwright and world traveler, died yesterday in Takoma Park, Md., where he was finishing a manuscript on American economics.

He came here last June from his home in Wilmington, Calif., to visit a brother in Ashburn, Va. Deciding to finish his latest book before returning West, he rented a house at 507 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, as a temporary residence.

Blamed on Overwork

Friends attributed his sudden death to overwork. There were no members of his family with him. His wife is in California and his children live in widely separated sections of the country.

He was author of 20 books and numerous plays. Mr. De Kay was born near New Hampton, Iowa, July 20, 1872. He journeyed widely and amassed a fortune in oil, mining and various other business enterprises.

He owned much property both at home and abroad. He had numerous claims against foreign governments for property confiscations, the largest against Mexico for $11,000,000.

The most recent of his published works is a book on economic conditions of this country entitled "A Way Out for America."

Managed Newspapers

He also was a frequent contributor to newspapers and magazines. At one time in his career he edited and managed a chain of papers in the West and Midwest.

Mr. De Kay's business enterprises included organization of the United States Packing Co. and the Mexican National Packing Co. The latter concern was involved in Mexican litigation at the time of his death.

Mr. De Kay wrote several successful plays, among them "Judas," in which Sarah Bernhardt starred.

He was a member of the National Geographic Society, the Algonquin Club of Boston, the National Arts and the Lawyers Clubs of New York.

His books included: "The Men of Mexico and the Land They Love," "Longings" and "The Weaver and the Way of Life."

Insurgents Revive Ebro Drive; Bomb 3 British Ships

Hendaye, France, Oct. 4 (AP).—Insurgent artillery, aviation and infantry smashed at government lines tonight, reviving the insurgent offensive against government positions on the Ebro front.

Government reports acknowledged the attacks were as severe as earlier drives before the Czechoslovak crisis and bad weather combined to bring a temporary halt to large-scale operations.

Insurgent dispatches from the Ebro front reported curtly only that their advance was continuing.

The government, which captured this region in a counter-offensive July 15, reported its defenses "not yet in danger" though hammering insurgent attacks still were under way.

Workers Alliance Demands 25 Cent WPA Minimum

Demand that the Works Progress Administration institute the 25 cent minimum wage for WPA workers authorized by the relief act of 1938 was made on Administrator Hopkins yesterday by officers of the Workers Alliance of America.

Characterizing the WPA's interpretation of that act by which the minimum payment has not been applied to the South as "a gigantic hoax perpetrated upon hundreds of thousands workers," the letter was presented to Hopkins by David Lasser, president, and Herbert Benjamin, secretary-treasurer of the alliance.

At the same time the officials reiterated their proposals for general wage increases and requested that WPA call a general wage conference in which representatives of the A. F. of L. railroad labor organizations and the C. I. O. be asked to participate.

Court Denies Warrings Bill Of Particulars

Tax Indictment Upheld Numbers Racket Charge Pine Fought Move

Charges that the Warring brothers made their money in the numbers racket are enough detail for an indictment for income tax fraud, Justice Laws ruled yesterday in refusing them a bill of particulars which had been vigorously opposed by District Attorney Pine.

Charles R., 30; Emmitt R., 32, and Leo Paul Warring, 43, were indicted, with Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax expert, and Henry L. Scherr, his employe, for conspiracy to defraud the Government. Former District Attorney Leo A. Rover, their counsel, asked the court to order the Government to supply more details on the charges.

Justice Laws acceded in one respect, directing the prosecution to state in what place other than the District the conspiracy was alleged to have taken place.

"In considering the motions," Justice Laws said in his opinion, "I have not assumed that any of the defendants might be gangsters and I have not taken into consideration the fact that the indictment has charged certain defendants as being engaged in gambling. I do not believe the Court is warranted in any presumption concerning the defendants except that they are innocent . . . until and unless . . . convicted.

"The Government should inform the defendants whether . . . a conspiracy is to be proved in other jurisdictions . . . and what those jurdisdictions are."

Giving the name of the State would be enough, he added.

The demand for full details of the alleged tax frauds, including the names of officers alleged to have been bribed, was unjustified, Justice Laws said, because no such details are given by the Treasury in sending a tax delinquency notice.

Sadur and Scherr were held not entitled to more details on their part in the alleged plot, the Court held, because they were accused as principals and could prepare the same defense as well as the Warrings.

Paris Alliance Is at an End, Russians Say

'France Annulled Pact' Word Called Worthless Isolation Held Price

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Oct. 4.—The Soviet government, through the semiofficial Le Journal de Moscow, today served notice that the U. S. S. R. no longer regards itself as an ally of France.

France, says the newspaper which habitually expresses the views of the Soviet foreign office, no longer has an ally in Europe except Britain—and the value of that alliance is very doubtful

Discussing the four-power Munich settlement of September 30, the paper says "international public opinion now asks—what is the value of France's word—the value of her pledges to the U. S. S. R. and of the Franco-Soviet pact?

"France Annulled Pact"

"The fact is that France on her own initiative and without consulting the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics has already annulled the Czechoslovak-Soviet pact, which was a corrollary of the Franco-Soviet pact.

"What now is the value of the latter pact since France has just torn up her treaty with Czechoslovakia—a treaty which bound her much more strongly.

"It has done this at the very moment when the latter country (Czechoslovakia) was under the threat of Fascist aggression. Loss of her allies and isolation—that is the price France will pay for her capitulation to the aggressor.

"On whom can France rely now? Her sole ally in Europe now is Britain—this same Britain which went behind France's back and signed the naval agreement with Germany (in 1935) . . . and which today comes to terms with Hitler—again behind France's back.

"Isolation—that is the inevitable price of France's capitulation to the agressor and that isolation was precisely Hitler's aim."

Meanwhile, Pravda and Izvestia, organs of the Communist Party and the Soviet government, respectively, both repudiated reports said to be circulating abroad that Soviet Russia had concurred in the Munich four-power accord.

They said Soviet ambassadors in London and Paris actually were not consulted by the British and French governments and that Russia had no part in the agreement, which Pravda described as "a capitulation, not an agreement."

Izvestia, referring to Prime Minister Chamberlain's promise of still more settlements to come, asked whether London and Paris are "going to take an interest in the German minority in Rumania now—or will they reveal the existence of an Italian minority in Spain?"

Apparently, Izvestia continued, "the small countries will be exterminated one after another—but without war—and thus the peace of Europe will be consolidated."

Army Urges Strength

The army newspaper, Red Star, said in an editorial that it was necessary to keep the armed forces prepared t oresist aggression from any quarter.

(In Paris it was noted there had been a recent cooling of relations between France and Russia, although the foreign office said no formal move had been made by Russia to denounce the pact.

(Political leaders in London viewed a cancellation of the Franco-Russian treaty as a necessary step to the completion of a four-power pact between France, Britain, Germany and Italy, a pact many of them would like to see negotiated.

(France's alliance with Russia was made the excuse by Reichmuehrer Hitler for his remailitarization of the Rhineland and his breakin gof the Locarno Pact because he felt the spirit of that pact was broken by the alliance.)

Russo-German Alliance?

By the Associated Press.

Great Britain, in the view of some experts in Washington, will play a careful game in her relations with Russia in the near future. She must watch her step lest she drive the Soviet Union into the arms of Germany.

Though there apparently is no love lost between Hitler and Stalin, the 1922 Treaty of Rapallo, which made Germany and Soviet Russia allies for a time, is still fresh in observers' minds, as is also the consternation it caused in Europe.

Some Britishers, it is thought here, would like to see Germany serve as a bulwark against Russia and Russia as a bulwark against Germany. Perhaps, it is said, there is a lingering hope in some British minds that Germany and Russia may so evenly balance each other in eastern Europe that neither one would prove a danger in western Europe and in other parts of the world.

Old Lineup Recalled

It is recalled here that Britain and Russia were traditional enemies throughout most of the ninteenth century and at the beginning of the twentieth.

It was not until the Kaiser began to build his navy and Germany rose as a possible menace to England that Britain and Russia came to terms in the treaty of 1907. This treaty brought both of them into the World War on the same side.

D. C. Czech Home From Prague With Doubts of Lasting Peace

Calls Price Too High Says Minorities Lose Blames Nazi Plot

F. J. RYSAVY.

The worst pessimist in Czechoslovakia did not anticipate three weeks ago that his country would be dismembered, F. J. Rysavy, artist representative, who has just returned from a six-month stay in Prague, declared last night.

"The Czech government was working honestly and conscientiously with the problem of the Sudetenland and everyone had confidence that it could be settled without inside interference.

"At no other place in history can you find where a nation was served up so rapidly, and without being consulted.

"If it would mean saving a peace, yes. No price is too high for that; but peace has not been assured by the movement and every free-thinking person is asking himself who is gaining.

"The minorities who go to Germany, Poland and Hungary will not be benefited. The Sudeten Germans will find their taxes higher now, just as the Austrians found, and their unemployment problem certainly will not be solved. The people who must now become a part of Poland and Hungary will not be so happy—nor so prosperous—as they have been with Czechoslovakia.

Rysavy, a Washington resident of Czech parentage, has spent several months of each year in Czechoslovakia since 1921. He represents several Czechoslovakian artists in this country. He left Prague on September 19, when the crisis was at its height.

He expressed doubt that the unfortunate little country can expect anyhing but the worst from plebicies to be held in the border provinces, unless they are supervised by an international commission.

"Look whta happened in Austria," he said.

Even where Nazi-inspirted agitation was greatest, there was perfect calm in Czechoslovakia during the days leading up to the Munich conference.

"I was eye-witness to several incidents that illustrate how greatly the country was provoked. I saw a group of Nazi-uniformed students grow noisy on the main street of Prague and spit in the eyes of policemen who reprimanded them, declaring they recognized no Czech police. In street cars and railway stations the agitators would offer the German mark as money and when politely informed it could not be accepted would cry out that 'soon wou will be glad to get it.'

"Lies poured in over the radio. From Vienna in the Czech language came broadcasts telling how grocery stores were being looted and how lawless the Czechs had become. This was no more true than the broadcast which stated that American police, with the aid of Federal officers, were rounding up gangsters to send them to Spain to fight against Franco.

"Five years ago there was no Sudeten German problem. The Germans in Czechoslovakia were happy. They were fairly treated, just as were the other minorities. They had their own schools, theaters and libraries and were represented politically.

"It was Nazi agitation that caused the difference and the agitation was begun not because Germany wished the Sudetens to receive better treatment, but because Hitler wished the country. The popular Nazi song has in its refrain two lines that go: 'Today the Fatherland. Tomorrow the world.' That gives an idea of what is wanted," Syravy declared.

Richard Crane Rites Set Today; Ex-Czech Envoy

Richmond, Va., Oct. 4. (AP)—Funeral services for Richard Crane, a former American diplomat and retired business leader, who was killed in a hunting accident on his Charles City County estate yesterday will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at historic Westover Church.

Private services for the family will be conducted at the estate, Westover, before the church services. Burial will be in the old cemetery at Westover.

The former United States Minister to Czechoslovakia (1919-22) was alone when his gun discharged and wounded him fatally.

The 56-year-old Virginian was president of the Crane Valve Co. from 1910 to 1914, and was private secretary to Secretary of State Robert Lansing for four years before going to Czechoslovakia.

Va. Democrats Here Condemn State Poll Tax

"Unalterable opposition" to the Virginia poll tax was expressed in a resolution unanimously adopted Monday by the Virginia Democratic Club of Washington at a meeting in the office of Arthur Clarendon Smith, 1313 U street northwest.

Smith was elected president of the organization after Gordon W. Wilkins surprised the 60 members present by offering his resignation as head of the club. Wilkins said he was finding law "a very jealous mistress." His unexpired term runs until March, 1939.

The poll levy was described as "ancient, inadequate and iniquitous" in speeches from the floor. Smith said the tax "was all right when it was established, but has served its purpose." He predicted with repeal of the measure 50,000 Virginia workers would become enfranchised.

Federal Employes Offered Half Fare To South America

Government employes and their families who would like to take the inaugural trip to South America on the new "good neighbor fleet" may do so at a "special" bargain reduction rate of 50 per cent, the Maritime Commission revealed yesterday.

While the commission said this half fare affects only the initial sailing, it admitted it was studying the possibilities of extending similar reductions to other groups, such as the clergy, exchange professors and traveling students.

Hitler Hails 'Racial Unity' In Karlsbad

Enters Third Zone 'Redeemer,' Says Frank Welcome Is Hysterical

By the Associated Press.

Karlsbad, Sudeten Germany, Oct. 4.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, in exultant military procession, added another slice of Czechoslovakia today to expanding Germany, which he declared "nobody will ever be able to destroy again."

Accompanied by Sudeten Leader Konrad Henlein, the Fuehrer rode behind his troops into this famed resort town, where the Sudeten movement received great impetus April 16 through promulgation of Henlein's autonomy demands.

"I didn't know how I would sometime get here," Hitler told a hysterical, cheering crowd. "But I did know that it would come."

Hitler, Henlein and their party arrived early this afternoon after troops occupied this third zone of Sudetenland to be taken over under the Munich four-power accord of September 3.

Military Rule Set Up

Military rule already existed throughout zones 1 and 2, occupied by German troops Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The fourth is to be occupied Thursday and Friday.

On this second day of his tour through "liberated" Sudetenland, Hitler chose this city, where Henlein's followers first drew world attention with a definite program for independence, for his second talk in the newly-German territory.

Because the people of Karlsbad had remained true to their race and he had remained faithful to his belief in the German people, Hitler said, "we both find each other in our common racial community . . . in our greater Reich, which nobody will ever be able to destroy again."

Again he assured a Sudeten audience that "this great German Reich, whose Fuehrer I am," was proud of the Sudeten Germans.

Hailed as Redeemer

Introducing Hitler, Karl Hermann Frank, Henlein's righthand man, asserted:

"In this historical moment in which you set foot on the soil of my home city, distress and suffering are forgotten and the intense desires of these peoples have come to realization through you, my Fuehrer.

"What we in Karlsbad resolved upon, you redeemed."

Many in the audience recalled that on April 16 Henlein was content to ask only that the Sudetens be given full autonomy and the right to practice their Nazi beliefs.

Berlin Calls for Funds

While Karlsbad Sudetens saw in Hitler the realization of their dream—union with Germany—an appeal issued in Berlin on the opening of the winter relief campaign called special attention to the tasks facing the expanding nation.

"In this year 10,000,000 Germans, who had to endure misery and distress for 20 years, returned to their home in the Reich," the appeal said of Austrians and Sudetens.

"Our special concern this winter is for them. They will know that the entire German people is ready to lead the battle against hunger and cold."

Propaganda Minister Goebbels, in an address in Berlin tomorrow, will open the campaign for funds.

Hungary Demands Occupation Of Czech Area Immediately

Asks Possession of 2 Towns Before Talks Seeks Parley Tomorrow on Fate of 800,000 Veterans Called to Service, Supplies Gathered

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Oct. 4.—Little Hungary, eager to regain territories of which she was stripped by World War treaties, tonight pressed the Czechoslovak government for immediate occupation of some Hungarian zones of Czechoslovakia.

In a note to the Prague government proposing a conference Thursday to discuss the minority claims, Hungary demanded that before the talks begin Czechoslovakia first must give these guarantees:

Hungary must be allowed to occupy, as a symbol of the return of territories in which 800,000 Hungarians live, two border towns and communes.

All Hungarian political prisoners in Czechoslovakia must be released.

All Hungarian-speaking soldiers in the Czechoslovak army must be sent home on leave immediately.

Local police and troops must be created in the Hungarian zones under a "mixed command."

Evacuation Reported

Hungary proposed that the claims be discussed at a conference at 4 p. m. Thursday at Komarom, a town on the Danube 80 miles west of Budapest, part of it in Hungary, part in Czechoslovakia.

There were unconfirmed reports tonight that the Czechoslovak authorities are evacuating the Hungarian-populated border regions along the 450-mile frontier.

Hungary, however, was careful to restrain her troops from marching in for fear that Rumania and Yugoslavia, allies of Czechoslovakia in the Little Eentente, might attack Hungary on the grounds she was the aggressor.

Veterans Called

The government indicated, however, it was preparing for all eventualities. Numerous war veterans more than 45 years old were ordered to army recruiting stations and certain raw materials were requisitioned. Exports of metals, textiles, chemicals and leather was prohibited.

Newspaper reports of "increased Czech terror" angered Hungarians meanwhile. Mass meetings in various parts of the country demanded immediate occupation of Czechoslovak territory inhabited by 800,000 Hungarians.

250,000 Seek 60,000 Jobs Open In CCC Camps

A quarter of a million youths have applied for 60,000 jobs now open in the Civilian Conservation Corps, Robert Fechner, CCC director revealed yesterday.

He confessed the CCC was surprised at the flood of applicants, since the school season is just getting under way and business conditions are reported to be improving. But because of the rush a survey will be made in the week ending October 8 so vacancies occurring then may be recorded and filled.

The 60,000 vacancies now to be filled result from discharges in the past six months. Camp Dix, N. J., will be the first post to receive recruits, about 1,800 a week being scheduled to arrive there in the training season.

Italy's Envoy Called Chief of Fascisti in U. S.

Witness Makes Charges Secret Police at Work Consuls Aid OVRA

By the Associated Press.

An anti-Fascist Italian testified to the House committee on "un-American activities" yesterday that Italy's ambassador and several of her consular officials were linked to Fascist undercover work in the United States.

The witness was Girolamo Valenti of New York, chairman of the Italian Anti-Fascist Committee.

"In the United States," he said, "there is a branch of the dreaded Italian government secret police, known as the OVRA.

"This is a spy organization which calls at the homes of American citizens of Italian descent and attempts to frighten them whenever they have participated in activities which do not conform to Fascist government policy.

"This organization is directly linked to the Italian consular service in the United States and is obviously under instructions of the Italian Ambassador in Washington."

Declaring he could name "victims of this vicious practice," the small, bushy-haired witness added in heavily accented English that he would do so if the committee would keep their identities secret.

"They fear reprisals against their relatives still living in Italy," he said.

Valenti said there were four known OVRA agents in this country. He named them as Capt. Carlo Vinti, Pietro Pupino Carbonelli and Count Fachetti Guiglia, of New York, and Ubaldo Guidi, of Boston.

Among consular officials "who have repeatedly taken part in Fascist affairs," he said, are Consul General Vecchiotti, of New York; Consul General Segre, of Boston; Consul General Pervan, of Philadelphia; Consul P. de Cicco, of New Haven, Conn., and Consul Jannelli, of Johnstown, Pa.

"While enjoying diplomatic immunity," the witness told the committee, "these Italian consular officials are exerting influence over American citizens of Italian descent with the view of gaining more power and prestige for their native government."

He testified that consular officials levy on American citizens and threaten those who will not subscribe to Mussolini's dictates and philosophy of government.

"They even resort to fraud to gain their ends," he continued, "by warning victims with threats of revoking their American citizenship and sending them home to Italy."

Charges "Absurd Bunk"

Philadelphia, Oct. 4 (AP).—Edoardo Pervan, Italian consul general here, today described as "absurd bunk" charges made by an anti-Fascist witness before the Dies committee investigating un-American activities.

Pervan was among Italian diplomatic representatives mentioned by Girolano Valenti before the committee.

"Signor Valenti's assertions are founded on nothing more than imaginative invention," Pervan said. "I have never heard of any Italian secret police being active here, nor have I been informed of threats being made upon Italians by any spies during my year at this post.

"No propaganda of any kind has developed in my office . . . His (Valenti's) assertions are absurd bunk."

D. A. R. Indorses Inquiry

The executive committee of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution Monday night unanimously adopted a resolution indorsing the investigations being conducted by the Dies committee.

Italy Starts Air Service to U. S. in Spring

American Line Aids Will Share Route Fleet Planned Jointly

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 4.—Italy gave notice it would be ready next spring to start its airliners shuttling across the North Atlantic.

The route will be used jointly by Ala Littoria, the Italian Airline, and American Export Airlines, subject to the approval of the new Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The Italian Line and American Export Steamship Lines, parent company of the American Airline, will help plot the course of the airliners, when service is started, by supplying hourto-hour weather data.

James Eaton, executive vice president of Export Airlines, said the two companies, effecting a "close working agreement," were engaged in drawing designs for a fleet of four-motored 65,000-pound seaplanes capable of carrying 125 passengers but that only a mail service was contemplated at first.

The entry of Italy brought to five the number of nations bidding for airline business over the north Atlantic. The only American company other than Export, Pan American Airways, has indicated it would be ready to fly both passengers and mail to Europe with its new Boeing "Atlantic Clippers" within a few weeks.

The other nations which have made survey flights are Great Britain, Germany and France.

U. S. Must Bolster Defenses Because of Munich, Says King

Logan Joins in Calling New Peace Insecure More Millions for Arms Held Necessary Bulkley Hopes for World Reductions

Senatr King (Democrat) Utah, said yesterday that last week's develoments in Europe might mkae it necessary for the United States to "spend hundreds of millions of dollars more for military purposes."

He said Great Britain and France, by "a spineless attitude" toward Reichsfuehrer Hitler, had "strengthened the forces which make for war and the domination of peoples and nations."

For that reason he was of the opinion that America must take every defensive precaution.

With this view, however, Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Oregon, partially disagreed. It is too early to determine the consequences of the Munich settlement of the Czech-German territorial dispute, he said, but at least the prospects for disarmament seem "more hopeful."

Logan Pessimistic

Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, sided with King, asserting that the outcome of the European crisis had made it essential that "our national defense program be carried out with all the more vigor."

King contended that "the cause of peace had not been served" at Munich and that additional crises and threats of war were to be expected.

A Senate veteran and one of the original advocates of American participation in the League of Nations, he blamed the present disturbed state of European affairs partially upon the United States, for its failure to support the League. Logan, who also had favored American entry into the League, again agreed with him.

Bulkley said any "radical arms reduction" must come from a general agreement among the nations.

"Must Withstand All"

Even leaving the present European situation out of the discussion, Logan said, the American isolation policy itself dictates a strong national defense.

"If the United States is going to be a hermit nation, and public opinion seems to want that," he added, "there is nothing open for us but to carry our national defense to the limit. We must be able to withstand attack from one and all, because, if we are going to live by ourselves, eventually they will all be against us."

D. C. Man Freed In Manslaughter Death in Bethesda

Charges of manslaughter against Harry J. Pirie, Washington monument dealer, of Chevy Chase, Md., in connection with the death of John Keegan, of Bethesda, were dismissed yesterday by Judge Harold C. Smith in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville, Md.

Charges of leaving the scene of an accident after having injured a person and of reckless driving are to be heard tonight by Justice of the Peace Ernest Houghton at Bethesda, Md.

Keegan was found lying in the street September 8. A passing motorist gave Pirie's tag number to police and State Police Corpl. James R. Miller found a dent in Pirie's front fender and charged him with leaving the scene and reckless driving. He was released on $500 bond and nine days later, when Keegan died, he was charged with manslaughter and the bond increased to $1,000.

Pirie told the judge he knew his car had struck a bump the night of the accident but that he had not known he had struck any person until the policemen came to investigate.

Britain Opens Parley With Italy on Spain

London

of Parliament would be extended until Thursday. He said the government then would propose adjournment until November 1, "with provision that it be called together again if it appeared necessary."

Opposition Leader Clement Attlee indicated he would oppose the proposal for adjournment Thursday.

Chamberlain was said, meanwhile, by reliable sources to be faced with the necessity of continuing his appeasement program with a split cabinet. Some ministers within the government were reported to oppose his foreign policy but to have determined on retaining their posts in order to influence government policy as much as possible.

Election Now Urged

Loyal Conservative members of Parliament were understood to be clamoring within the party ranks for an immediate general election while the prime minister's public popularity is still at its height because he kept Europe at peace by negotiating the partition of Czechoslovakia.

Debate raged in Commons amid growing signs that Europe's crisis had split all British political parties internally and brought the possibility of an early general election.

Many quarters expect Chamberlain to rush through negotiations with Hitler and Premier Mussolini for an agreement and then appeal to the country to decide in a general election whether his policy is right or wrong.

Political quarters agreed the prime minister would be upheld in view of the overwhelming Conservative majority in Commons. But the debate has shown some misgivings about his "deal with dictators" policy which have crept even into Conservative ranks.

Two powerful voices remain to be heard in the debate, Winston Churchill, war-time first lord of the admiralty, and David Lloyd George, the war-time prime minister, both of whom are to speak tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Oct. 4.—Reliable sources indicated tonight that Britain and Italy had made another start toward settlement of differences born of the Ethiopian and Spanish wars.

British and Italian officials alike were non-committal on the second conversation of two days between Lord Perth, British ambassador, and Foreign Minister Count Ciano, but persons in close touch with current trends said the move had been made toward resumption of Anglo-Italian negotiations.

These negotiations were suspended last spring after an Anglo-Italian agreement to maintain the status quo in the Mediterranean. "Settlement" of the Spanish civil war was a condition on which the accord would go into effect.

France to Send Envoy

Today's talks came along with word from Paris that the French cabinet had decided on a move toward better relations with Italy by sending an ambassador to Rome, recognizing the Ethiopian conquest.

Comment on this possibility was withheld in official Italian circles. Others thought Italian press hostility toward France, which had flared in recent days, might subside as the first effect of such an action by the Paris government.

More important, some foreign sources said, was the possibility Britain might follow France in recognizing the conquest of Ethiopia although there was no indication that Lord Perth discussed such a possibility with Count Ciano in their meetings yesterday and today.

As a preliminary phase, some sources said, Britain was expected to co-operate with Italy in final settlement of the Czechoslovak situation. It was understood in diplomatic circles that Lord Perth discussed Hungary's claim to part of Czechoslovakia when he met with Count Ciano.

In some quarters it was thought London might support Hungary's claim. Premier Mussolini strongly supports Hungary in this matter.

Baldwin Takes Stand

London, Oct. 4.—Earl Baldwin, former prime minister, emerged unexpectedly today as a staunch defender of his successor, Prime Minister Chamberlain, who is undergoing a bitter three-day attack in both the House of Lords and the House of Commons, for his self-styled "peace with honor" which dismembered Czechoslovakia to appease Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Sixteen months ago Stanley Baldwin, fresh from his abdication triumph over former King Edward VIII, handed over the reins of government to Chamberlain and accepted and earldom from Edward's brother, the present kin. Earl Baldwin then retired into the shadwos, content to let his successor wrestle with Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

Today, in recognition of the crisis of last week, which has not altogether been cleared up, Baldwin delivered his maiden speech in the House of Lords. There was some speculation as to how severe he might be on Chamberlain, who incurred his disfavor last February by dropping Baldwin's protege, Anthony Eden, as foreign secretary. It was thought that if Baldwin had joined Eden, Duff Cooper, Winston Churchill and the other conservatives who are criticizing the premier's surrender to Hitler, then surely the Chamberlain government might crash.

Fearful of Bombings

Before Earl Baldwin spoke this evening, Chamberlain had been accused in the Lords of "snatching defeat from the jaws of victory," in the Commons it had been said that Hitler had frightened Chamberlain out of his life and that Chamberlani had exhibited "sheer

Remarking that upon Chamberlain rested the grave decision as to war or peace, Earl Baldwin said:

"No prime minister ought to commit his country to war unless he is convinced that the country is ready.

"There would have been tens of thousands of mangled women and children before a single soldier had given his life for his country. That is a very awful thought."

Refusing to accept the Laborite argument that the Fascists must be fought some day, so why not now, Baldwin said: "No greater fallacy was ever uttered. War is never inevitable in the distance. If there were a 95 pr cent chance of war at some future date, I would hold on to the 5 per cent till I died."

Baldwin complimented Chamberlain on his initiative in seeking out Hitler and added that he knew of no other Briton who could have succeeded as well as Chamberlain.

Younger Men Dissident

Baldwin's enthusiasm was not shared by some of the younger, more militant men in both houses of Parliament. Lord Lloyd, for example, one of the most influential men behind the scenes of British affairs, said the British and French had used "third degree" methods to force the Czechs to submit to Hitler.

"When peace walked in, justice walked out," said Lloyd. But justice is greater than peace. There can be no peace in the hearts of the English people when they think of what was done to the Czech people last week."

In the House of Commons Chamberlain's boast of "peace with honor" was challenged by Lord Cranborne, a former undersecretary to the foreign office, who resigned in sympathy with his chief, Anthony Eden, last February. Cranborne admitted that Chamberlain had brought back peace, for which everyone was grateful.

"But where was honor?" Cranborne asked. "I have looked and looked, and I cannot see it. It seems to me a wicked mockery to describe by so noble a name the agreement that has been reached at Munich."

Today's final spokesman for the government was Sir Thomas Inskip, who declared the government had not broken a single pledge regarding Czechoslovakia.

As for the new Anglo-French guarantees of the revised frontiers of Czechoslovakia, Inskip said this treaty of guarantees has not yet been drawn up and, therefore, the guarantees were not yet in force, but, if an act of unprovoked aggression were committed against Czechoslovakia, then Britain would feel itself "under a moral obligation to take all steps in their power to preserve the integrity of Czechoslovakia."

Some informed persons said the government has consented to grant tonomy providing it is within "the framework of the republic." Some Slovak leaders described the contemplated autonomy as a form of federalism.

Purple Shades Lead In Window Colors

Paris (AP).—In colors, purple and purple-influenced shades run through the winter mode. Pale mauves and lilacs register, the cyclamens, fuchsias, violets, all the petunias. Greens are choice coat and ensemble colors, in gray lichen greens, deep bluish greens or olives. Some dashing new reds appear in military scarlet. Wine reds hold the fort all along the line, with berry reds for the upper range.

Medium gray is up and coming. So is the pinkish rust of the cornaline stone. The new browns are either very dark or beaver shade. Ardoise blues and light navy show up, and vivid peony pinks as usual, and the old standby, black.

Almost all these colors repeat for evening. Evening stresses also the pastels and white. Gray sulphur yellow, old rose and strong poison green fill out the evening palette.

Daladier Wins Chamber Vote On Munich

French

recede everywhere it is still unleashed," Daladier said.

This apparently was a reference to the Spanish war, one of the first items on the French list of questions to be liquidated.

Defending the Munich dismemberment of Czechoslovakia as an escape from war, the premier asserted that the success of the four-power talks was the result above all of the "demonstration of our strength."

"Know all Frenchmen who desire the safety of France must consider themselves in a state of permanent mobilization for the service of peace and the fatherland," Daladier bluntly informed the Chamber of Deputies.

Hails "Mutual Respect"

With mutual respect established between France and Germany, he said, "we hope to be able to establish a durable peace."

The premier backed up this stand by calling on Parliament for immediate approval of his demand for economic and financial decree powers to pull the nation out of difficulties created by the crisis over Czechoslovakia.

"Progressive mobilization" and hasty restocking of war supplies is estimated to have cost France between 10,000,000,000 and 15,000,000,000 francs—about $269,700,000 to $404,550,000.

Daladier paid a tribute to President Roosevelt's overtures for peace, messages to several governments, during the crisis last week. Deputies stood and cheered when he spoke of "the great, generous and logical voice of President Roosevelt."

Armed Forces Parade

Simultaneously French armed forces marched before their commanders in chief in an implied warning that France was ready to resist any further German efforts to break the power of France.

Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin reviewed his armies on the eastern frontier, while Vice Admiral Jean Darlan, chief of the navy general staff, inspected his naval forces at Brest.

Finance Minister Paul Marchandeau said the government would stake its life on the issue of decree powers which would establish a virtual temporary dictatorship. He said the powers would be requested until December 13.

Daladier earlier today addressed a letter to Prime Minister Chamberlain expressing admiration for the British statesman's "ardent will for peace."

Replying to a letter from Chamberlain designed to dispel French concern over the British-German friendship declaration of September 30, which followed the Munich agreement, Daladier declared:

"France felt, during this crisis, that the bonds of cordial friendship and esteem which unite her to the British nation were tightening around her."

"Can Count on Britain"

Daladier's address, emphasizing French strength and not mentioning by name France's allies, implied hope for a new period of peace for European nations based on respect for each other's arms.

It was on this basis, Daladier indicated, that France would attempt to "add to these old and tried friendships (British and Soviet Russian) the support of renewed or new friendships (German and Italian).

"We can count on the friendship of France and Britain," Daladier said.

This was taken in chamber lobbies as a clear indication the French government would make the London and Paris union the keystone of its new foreign policy while bettering relations with Germany and Italy.

Premier Cheered

Daladier's address, heard at the start with cool but intense interest, gradually rallied the chamber until at the close almost all the deputies except the Communists rose to cheer the premier.

Other party spokesmen followed the premier to the rostrum to announce their stands on the government's policy.

The Socialist leader and former premier, Leon Blum; Leon Barety, independent; Ludovic Frossard, Socialist, and the Republican Union all threw their support to the government.

Henri de Kerillis, who later voted against the government, reclared, "war hos been delayed, but not avoided." He criticized the government for permitting Germany to improve her military strength at Czechoslovakia's expense.

"Blackmail!" Say Reds

Other political leaders as widely separated as Gaston Bergery, of the Independent Left, and Jean Ybarnegaray, of the French Social Party, gave their cotes to Daladier.

The Communists, however, held that France had "paid a heavy tribute to war blackmail."

Daladier submitted a bill which would give his government full power to rule by decree until the end of the year. The text of the bill follows:

"Exceptional circumstances exposed in the communication of the government have justified the demand which it presents with view to taking indispensible measures of public safety.

"The government is authorized until December 31, 1938, to take by decrees, deliberated and aproved by the cabinet, measures destined to achieve immediate recovery of the economic and financial situation of the country.

"These decrees, which will have the force of law, will be submitted to ratification of the Chambers before January 1, 1939."

Greenbelters Form Market Co-operative

The co-operative organizing committee, formed last night, will meet again Tuesday night at the Greenbelt Theater. Peter J. Carroll is chairman.

Fairfax County Building Sets 2-Year Mark

Month's Total $232,290 Nurse Is Promoted School Board to Meet

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

The September total of building permits in Fairfax County was the largest for any month since the building permit law was enacted two years ago, according to County Commissioner of Revenue James U. Kincheloe.

Last month his office issued 59 permits for work having a valuation of $232,290, of which $225,450 was for new buildings and $6,840 for improvements. The next highest month was April, 1937, when permits totaling $191,650 were issued.

Permits issued last month raised the total for the first nine months of this year to $30,000 more than for the same months of 1937. This year the valuation is $968,395 and last year at this time it was $937,375.

County Clerk John M. Whalen reported his office admitted 344 deeds and trusts to record. This is 110 less than admitted to record in August but it is higher than for September last year when 320 such instruments were recorded.

Mrs. Seamans Promoted

Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamans, Fairfax County health nurse for ten years, has been appointed supervising nurse of the county health unit, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Edward M. Holmes, jr., county health director.

Mrs. Seamans, in addition to her duties with the health department, has been active with the County Red Cross Chapter and the Tuberculosis Association and has conducted a number of home hygiene classes.

Dr. Holmes also announced appointment of Miss Carmina Hedspeth to handle public health work in the western part of the county. Mrs. Hannah Weiser is assigned to the eastern section of the county. Mrs. Edith Norris will be clinic nurse attached to the unit under a Works Progress Administration grant.

School Board Meets

October meeting of the Fairfax County School Board will be held tomorrow afternoon in the board room at Fairfax courthouse. A large delegation from the Vienna Parent-Teacher Association is scheduled to file protests against overcrowded condition of the school and the fact that the school board in its new building program made no provision for repairing the Vienna school, which the parent-teacher association contends is not properly maintained.

Bond Decision Put Off

Decision on whether or not to hold a special bond issue election at town of Vienna last night was postponed two weeks in order to give the engineer in charge of the preliminary survey an opportunity to place mimeographed copies of his report, with detailed descriptions and figures, in the hands of each taxpayer.

Maj. Paul Norcross stated that his original estimate of $200,000 had been reduced to $175,000, including $96,000 for sewer lines and $79,000 for water installations. This will cover every street except a few in outlying sections and in the colored settlement.

He estimated a 7-cent-front-foot assessment over a period of six years would cover construction costs, after which the two projects would be self-liquidating. A $2 per month charge for service for both sewer and water would cover operating costs. There would be no increase in general taxes. Ord Strayer presided at a mass meeting in the town hall attended by 200 residents. It was thought that by October 17 news might be received whether PWA money would be available. Norcross felt optimistic saying that water and sewer projects were given preference in allotments.

Herndon Contract Let

T. Calvin Owens, of Bethesda, Md., was awarded the contract for construction of the new municipal building at Herndon, on a low bid of $25,500. This was the lowest of nine bids received by the town council.

The building, which will house municipal offices, the postoffice, jail and an auditorium, will be financed by a PWA grant of $12,000 and the balance by a local bond issue, authorized last month. Work will be started at the site, in Railroad Park near the center of town, as soon as PWA approval is obtained.

Mrs. Harkness Emerges From 26-Day Coma

South Boston, Va., Oct. 4.—Mrs. Beulah Harkness, 60, of Vienna, Va., regained consciousness Monday for the first time since September 9, when she was injured in an automobile crash in which her husband, A. W. Harkness, chief of the editorial section of the Geological Survey, was killed.

School Group to Meet

The District Public School Association will hold its first fall meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the board room at the District Building.

'Just Sitting' On Curb Ruled Legal in Rockville

Rockville's courthouse curbing sitters won their battle to sit as long as they desire on the curbing around the courthouse lawn yesterday when Judge Harold C. Smith dismissed charges of loitering brought under a recent town ordinance.

Judge Smith held that Mosby Butt, familiar and veteran sitter, was not in violation of the law so long as he "just sat." If the sitters obstruct traffic or pedestrians, make rude remarks about passersby or indulge in loud or profane language, then they are liable, the judge held.

The ordinance was passed by the town council of Rockville after a lengthy word battle with the Montgomery County commissioners who refused to have any part in the battle to halt the ancient custom of "just sitting" on the courthouse edge. Policeman Arthur Burke arrested Butt in a test case.

Police Catch Prisoner But Lack a Prison

Gloucester, N. J., Oct. 4 (AP).—The problem of a prisoner without a prison perplexed police today.

They arrested Frank McGurk on a theft charge but had no place to put him because the old city hall jail is being demolished. McGurk sat on a chair for nearly 24 hours in a jailless police headquarters until a bondsman arrived.

Prince Georges Investigates Gas Tax Claims

Riverdale Asks Rebate Mount Rainier Appeals Unpaid for 5 Years

The Prince Georges County commissioners at their meeting in Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday promised to investigate claims of the county's incorporated towns for additional shares of the gasoline tax rebates from the State roads commission.

Bird H. Dolby, corporation counsel, presented Mount Rainier's claim of $2,858 which, he said, represented the balance due the town over the last five years.

Edward B. Dunford, Riverdale town counsel, submitted an itemized bill for $1,203, representing the balance due for the last three years.

Dolby, who is president of the county municipal association and chairman of a committee of that association which investigated the gas tax refunds, also laid before the board of commissioners general claims in behalf of the county's 21 other incorporated towns.

Total Claimed $15,000

Estimates placed the total amount due the incorporated towns at about $15,000.

Dunford said the towns had been receiving a smaller percentage of the gas tax rebates to the county than they were entitled to under the legislative act creating the State roads commission in 1932.

The town's shares, Dunford declared, were based on the proportion of their assessed evaluation to the total evaluation of the county in 1932.

Sewering Demanded.

Dr. A. B. Hooton, Prince Georges County health officer, revealed yesterday legal notices had been served on property owners in the colored residential communities of Melrose and Cedar Heights to require sewer connections wher possible.

In his monthly report, Dr. Hooton stated "many dangerous insanitary conditions" had been found in these two communities.

In Cedar Heights, Dr. Hooton said, a case of typhoid fever had been traced to the use of a polluted spring for drinking water. The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission has been asked to install public water hydrants.

Dr. Hooton's report disclosed the following diease cases had been discovered in the county: Spotted fever, 1; infantile paralysis, 2; tuberculosis, 12; typhoid, 1; syphilis, 24; pneumonia, 1; scarlet fever, 2.

Invite Nice to Dance.

Gov. Harry W. Nice and Judge Oscar Leser, candidate for the United States Senate, have been invited to attend a dance to be given by the Prince Georges County Republican Club Saturday night at Beaver Dam Country Club, Landover, Md.

Republican candidates for the various county offices will attend. The committee in charge of arangements is headed by Mrs. W. A. Middleton, general chairman; and Police Court Judge George B. Merrick, vice chairman.

Va. Board Sets Parleys For 'Gas' Station Men

Richmond, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—The State Conservation Commission announced today the first of three meetings designed to acquaint service station operators and attendants with points of tourist interest in Virginia would be held in Richmond October 17.

Other meetings will be held November 7 at Harrisonburg and November 21 at Fredericksburg.

Davis, Who Got Helium From Gas, Dies

Noted Chemist Was 51 Served Army Here Rites in Petersburg

By the Associated Press.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 4.—John Williams Davis, 51, nationally known chemist who was credited with the invention of the process for separating helium from natural gas, died here today of a heart attack. He became ill Saturday.

He was a consulting engineer with the Atmospheric Nitrogen Corporation and the Solvay Process Co. The Solvay company has a plant at Hopewell Va., near here.

He died at the home of his mother, Mrs. Richard B. Davis. The funeral was set for 4 p. m. Wednesday, in Blandford Cemetery in Petersburg.

Davis was in charge of helium work for the United States Air Service during the World War. His inventions included improvements in the processes for nitrogen fixation.

A native of Petersburg and a graduate of Randolph-Macon College, Cornell and the University of Illinois, he taught electrical engineering at Harvard, Vanderbilt, Stamford and Illinois before the World War. His discovery as to helium was made while with the United States Bureau of Mines between 1919 and 1925.

He became head of the technical department of the Atmospheric Nitrogen Corporation before 1929, and in that year was made consulting engineer to both the nitrogen corporation and the Solvay Process Co.

In the World War, he served as an adjutant at Kelly Field, in Texas, and later as assistant to the executive officer of the U. S. Air Service at Washington before being placed in charge of helium work. He was a captain in the Air Service Reserve.

Survivors are his mother; his wife, who before marriage was Elizabeth Grimes Walker, of Washington; three children; a brother, Carl Hall Davis, of Wilmington, N. C., and a sister, Mrs. David A. Harrison, jr., of Hopewell.

Lawson Pleads Innocent, Asks For Jury Trial

Baltimore, Oct. 4 (AP).—William P. Lawson, former police commissioner here, pleaded innocent today to charges preferred in connection with his now-closed securities business and asked a jury trial.

Codefendants with Lawson, Frank Mueller, Frederick A. Mueller and Vincent L. Clisham, also pleaded innocent and asked jury trials.

Circuit Court Judge Joseph N. Ulman stated the trials would be held after the November 8 general election, when two new members will be elected to the bench here. He pointed out the court's docket now is crowded and that the bench is undermanned at present due to

Other guests were Mrs. and Mrs. Les. E. Walton, Springfield, Mo., Dr. W. J. B. Orr, local director, and H. S. Sheppard.

More PWA Funds Granted Staunton

Staunton, Va., Oct. 4.—Regional headquarters of the Public Works Administration in Atlanta, Ga., has approved Staunton's application for an additional $50,000 needed to complete financing of the municipality's sewage project.

The original request for a grant of $109,800 was approved some time ago, but subsequent figures submitted by a Baltimore engineering firm called for additional money. The additional 45 per cent of $50,000 will bring the Government's participation to $132,817. The new system will cost in the neighborhood of $275,000.

An impression of Sam Matthews by James Montgomery Flagg

A Name of Fine Traditions since 1788

IF YOU'VE watched Sam Matthews on the golf course, you've noticed that he never tries to kill the ball. "Easy does it!" is Sam's idea.

Whatever Sam does, he does with moderation and self-control. That's why he keeps on making "birdies" and "eagles", both on the golf course and off.

For many decades, the Carstairs family have been serving "men who care" and men who "take care". Men who value fine quality too highly to abuse it. The Carstairs Whiskey of today is a skillful blend of several selected whiskies, the youngest of which is 4 years old. Blended with that fine craftsmanship traditional with Carstairs since 1788.

Carstairs is a whiskey you may drink with relish and serve with pride on the brightest of red-letter occasions.

Judicial Triumph

One reason for the remarkable prestige acquired by the Supreme Court, according to James Bryce, is the advantage it has had "of relegating questions not only intricate and delicate, but peculiarly liable to excite political passions, to the cool, dry atmosphere of judicial determination." Reports from Harrisburg indicate that the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania is rendering a similar service.

The investigation of graft and corruption charges against Gov. Earle had become a highly volatile political issue in the Keystone State. The proposed Dauphin County grand jury inquiry had been denounced as a Republican plot. Gov. Earle had summoned the General Assembly and secured the hasty enactment of measures suspending the grand jury investigation and giving the State House of Representatives first jurisdiction in probing charges against civil officers subject to impeachment. What should have been a judicial inquiry had become a political melee.

With customary logic and judicial restraint, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court has straightened out the controversy in a manner to which no reasonable objection can be made. It has declared unconstitutional two of Gov. Earle's measures on the ground that they would "suspend criminal laws" and constitute "an invasion of judicial powers." Any other decision would have permitted servile legislators to shield suspect officials by pretending to investigate their conduct until expiration of the period during which a grand jury may act.

Under this decision the grand jury investigation will remain an effective weapon against corruption in public office. Without in any way interfering with the legislative inquiry, the court has made it possible for the grand jury to proceed with its investigation simultaneously. And to avoid any possible clashes between the two in summoning witnesses and using documentary evidence, the court has retained jurisdiction in the case as a sort of referee.

The impartiality of the court was further indicated by its attitude toward the new statute granting the attorney general complete authority to supersede district attorneys. That measure was upheld. In this case, however, the court noted that Attorney General Guy K. Bard was obviously disqualified because of his appointment by the official under investigation. At the same time it directed a hearing to determine whether the local prosecutor is actuated by political motives. If he is found to be biased, the case will be turned over to a district attorney from another county.

A veritable political tempest has been calmly and wisely subjected "to the cool, dry atmosphere of judicial determination." For that real service, Pennsylvanians of every political view will doubtless be grateful.

Subsidy Upon Subsidy

No man has worked harder than Secretary Wallace to solve the great American dilemma usually referred to as the farm problem. As he moves from expedient to expedient none will question that he has the best interests of the farmer at heart. It must be remembered, too, that his proposals of new farm benefits are frequently made to forestall the adoption of more radical measures. Unfortunately, however, these facts do not minimize the confusion into which the Administration's agricultural policy appears to be sinking.

Mr. Wallace recently advocated a system of export subsidies for wheat. Now he has turned the attention of his department to subsidies intended to stimulate domestic consumption of cotton. Since cotton bulks much larger than wheat in our foreign trade, many will wonder why the remedies were not reversed. Mr. Wallace's explanation is that various other governments are providing artificial stimuli to the movement of wheat in the world market. Cotton exports are not similarly encouraged by other countries.

So far as it goes, that argument is reasonable enough. But it does not iron out the inconsistencies in the Department of Agriculture's policy regarding cotton. For a number of years the Government has made loans to growers and curtailed cotton planting to raise the price obtained for that commodity by farmers. Experts are convinced that this program has substantially narrowed the market for American cotton. So consumption subsidies are now being considered.

The fact that warehouses are "bursting with cotton, while thousands of textile workers are without jobs and millions of families are getting along without the cotton goods they need" is certainly a baffling paradox. But is it likely to be solved by taxing consumers to increase returns to farmers, as Mr. Wallace suggests, and then offsetting the effects of that subsidy by paying another subsidy to certain groups of consumers? Instead of pointing the way to a reasonable adjustment of supply and demand factors, this step may lead on toward greater chaos.

Secretary Wallace regards his proposal as a means of avoiding both unlimited production accompanied by low prices and rigid production control leading to high prices along with smaller demands for American cotton. Most observers will probably agree with him that either of these extremes would impose severe hardships on the farmer. It does not follow, however, that a middle course paved with expedients can bring about any lasting improvement of existing conditions.

The very fact that Mr. Wallace considers new subsidy plasters essential to patch up the AAA program suggests that governmental control of agriculture is breaking down. If that is the case, it would be far better to take a realistic view of the situation than to add new subsidies to offset the effects of existing subsidies.

Peace Must Be Positive

"Peace," said Neville Chamberlain in the House of Commons Monday, "is not to be obtained by sitting still and waiting for it to come." A few hours later the Undersecretary of State reiterated these words to the American people. "Peace," said Sumner Welles in his radio broadcast on Monday night, "is not negative. It is not merely the momentary abstention from a resort to war. Peace is, in its very essence, positive."

To these identical conclusions, of which none can question the validity, is now to be added the equally undeniable assertion made by Premier Daladier before the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday. "The people, all the peoples of the world," he said, "wish peace." Then by a vote of 535 to 75, with few except Communists in opposition, the chamber approved his policy at Munich.

There is today a magnificent opportunity to transform this universal yearning for peace into concrete accomplishment. Nor is the presence of that opportunity concealed by the enormous difficulties of the task. To men of goodwill, of insight and of courage these difficulties will themselves add to the appeal of the challenge at hand. To the little minds of every country there must be stressed the appalling alternative which will assuredly follow failure to organize peace. It is too obviously a progressive race in armaments, leading inevitably to the utter smash so narrowly averted last week.

By peace is meant a restoration of international health. And to achieve that restoration two separate major steps are necessary. One is an accurate diagnosis of the situation which exists today. The other is scientific curative treatment based upon that diagnosis.

The diagnosis, in essentials, is not difficult. The fundamental fact in the situation is the complete collapse of the Treaty of Versailles. Over the destruction of this treaty, which for nearly 19 years has helped to impede recuperative forces of every kind, few tears are being shed. It is the method employed to bring final collapse, and the suffering of the Czechs as the chief victim of the transition, which arouses hostility and concern.

Of the merits and demerits of the Munich agreement much has been, and doubtless will continue to be, written. But life goes on and adjustment to inevitable changes is rational as well as imperative. Wailing and gnashing of teeth will not alter the fact that the Munich agreement is in force. They merely conceal the now vital issue of whether or not the agreement shall be constructively enlarged.

Mr. Sumner Welles, in his address on Monday night, showed that it is the purpose of the Administration to accept the situation constructively. The President was correct in saying, and the Department of State was correct in reiterating, that "upon the merits of the decisions reached in Munich we do not need, nor do we intend, to pass." Certainly the nation which refused to underwrite the Treaty of Versailles should be the last to denounce its final collapse.

Both from the juridical and the practical viewpoint, the present situation is unprecedented and impossible as a permanent arrangement. The status of all of Central Europe is now without legal basis and in this chaotic situation the first necessity is to create a stable basis, acting on Hitler's assurance that with annexation of the Sudeten areas his territorial ambitions in Europe have now been completely satisfied.

If this is the case, and the immediate desirability is to validate the pledge, the prospects of building firmly on the present ruins are excellent. That they appear so to the Administration is strongly indicated by Mr. Welles' assertion that "today, perhaps more than at any time during the past two decades, there is presented the opportunity for the establishment by the nations of the world of a new world order based upon justice and upon law."

That is the diagnosis on which the statesmanship of the democracies, at least, is now generally agreed. But of the prescription to follow from that diagnosis there is as yet no intimation. Responsibility for writing it, however, clearly rests with the four powers which reached accord at Munich. It is up to them to turn the present negative peace to positive ends.

In the association of these great nations, if it is sincere on the part of Germany and Italy, there is the basis of a peace which "is not merely the momentary abstention from a resort to war." The constructive association of these four powers, which broke down at Geneva because based on enforced acceptance of a punitive treaty, is, indeed, the essential condition prerequisite to real peace as defined by Mr. Welles. Two of these powers have given very tangible evidence of their anxiety for a stable settlement. It is now up to Germany and Italy to do likewise, presumably making the start in respect to speedy and honorable settlement of the Spanish war.

As Mr. Welles strongly intimates, the United States will be willing to do its share in the re-creation of international stability. Continued co-operation can probably be expected from Russia, if only because the internal difficulties there are so strongly conducive to a policy of peace abroad. Japan, which has had more fighting lately than even its warlords wanted, would probably also now be receptive to negotiated settlements.

In the words of Neville Chamberlain: "We have only laid the foundations of peace. The superstructure is not even begun."

There is good reason to doubt even the permanence of the new foundations. But in their recoil from the abyss, in their ardent hope for a better day, the people of the world want to let bygones be bygones. If constructive statesmanship can catch that mood, can let the dead past bury its dead, then, step by step, the foundations can solidify and the superstructure can at last be raised.

Hungary's Claims

With each passing day the territory ruled over by Czechoslovakia steadily diminishes. Three zones in the Sudetenland have already been taken over by Germany and there are others to follow as the time-table agreed on at Munich is carried out. Teschen has been annexed by Poland. Soon plebiscites are to be held to determine the future ownership of other German and Polish-inhabited areas in the republic. And there are also Hungary's claims to be taken into account.

These latter claims, it may be hoped, will be amicably settled by direct negotiation between Prague and Budapest. Having already lost so much valuable territory, the Czech authorities will of course be reluctant to part with more. For this none will blame them. But it is doubtful that the process of partition put into effect for the benefit, first, of Germany, and then of Poland, can be halted before the demands of the Magyars are at least partially satisfied.

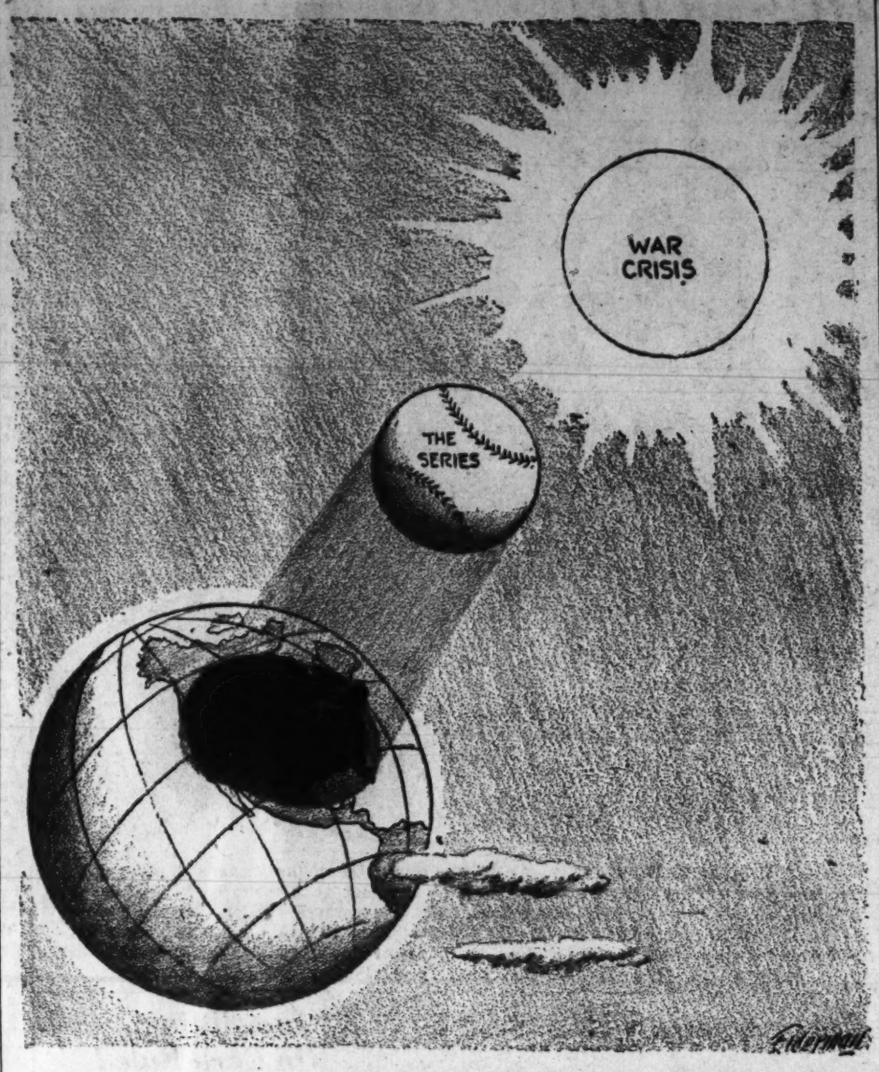

That Hungary has a legitimate claim is impossible to deny. Even so patriotic a Czechoslovak statesman as Thomas Masaryk, the founder and first president of the republic, admitted it when he once suggested that some of the territory once Hungarian might be returned to Hungary. And a more immediate circumstance is that failure of the Budapest government to benefit from the present partitioning of Czechoslovakia would have a disastrous effect on the Imredy government. The next development would then probably be a Nazi regime at Budapest.

The Nazis have been active in Hungary for some time. They have very shrewdly capitalized two major grievances of the Magyar people. The first arises from the fact that Hungary has kept its pre-war land system practically unchanged. Thus, out of a total population of around 9,000,000 some 3,000,000 are landless peasants. The partition of the big estates is a cardinal point in the Hungarian Nazi program.

The second grievance is the familiar one of farm folk resenting urban domination. The grievances of the peasants have mounted as the price of farm products has declined while that of manufactured and imported goods has remained high. This latter irritation has, in Hungary, encouraged anti-Semitism. For the Magyar aristocracy as a class, scorning industry and commerce, long ago permitted these activities to be monopolized by Jews and Germans. And insofar as Nazi agitation reduces the field of activity open to the Jews, the Germans stand to benefit. That, of course, is not unwelcome to Berlin.

A people proud of their independence, the Magyars have no desire to become the tail to Hitler's kite. On the other hand the addition of the Sudetenland to the Third Reich, increasing German industrial strength but also increasing its dependence on outside supplies of foodstuffs, increases Berlin's interest in Hungary. To meet the danger, Premier Imredy and his colleagues will need all their ingenuity and all their resources. The establishment of a regime of friendship between Budapest and Prague would help considerably in keeping Hungary from passing under the swastika.

A Grateful Shadow

Letters to the Editor

Industrial Home School

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are some important aspects in the controversy about moving the Industrial Home School into a rural location which seem not to be receiving consideration. The children confined there are generally of a low order of mentality, about 25 per cent of them are actually feeble-minded. They are placed there by the court without regard for this handicap. In many cases they are behavior problems because of their mental deficiency, and not because of willful delinquency.

They work at the institution at care and upkeep of the place, but what they need for real rehabilitation is positive and constructive training for self-maintenance. Well-paid instructors should be employed, well-paid because they should have good training for the jobs and they must be excellent disciplinarians. The school system with its new occupational training facilities should place an occupational teacher at Industrial Home School, in addition to the present corps of regular teachers. The Board of Public Welfare should spend any money it can obtain in this direction, rather than in building an entirely new institution.

The Industrial Home School is now a beautiful place. During the present administration, the grounds have become increasingly beautiful, all the buildings have been thoroughly overhauled and made attractive, an adequate swimming pool has been installed, a new paved road has been built. The buildings to be sure are old, but no model institution could offer better housing facilities than those buildings in the last decade have been made to offer. Furthermore, its location provides more of a "life situation" which present-day psychologists deem necessary, than a strictly rural location would provide.

Occupational training which would meet the requirements of children of dull normal and subnormal mentality and thus qualify them to become useful self-supporting adults would do far more to curb their tendencies toward delinquency than a brand new building in the country to house them would do. And until the public becomes aware of the fact that these children, deprived of parental affection had handicapped by low mentality, have as much right to the kind of education they can imbibe as any other children, we shall continue to be subjected to such crimes as murder, rape, robbery and holdups in increasing numbers.

It is not a better home but better training that the occupants of the Industrial Home School need. This would utimately be the cheapest way to care for our delinquents.

The Direct Primary

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Only Connecticut and Rhode Island continue to select all their nominees by party conventions," according to your editorial of September 14. But you overlook Delaware, which not only retains that system but has the last of the State constitutions (1898) not ratified by popular vote. (See my "People's Law," Ch. XXII).

Again you observe that "forty-five States, now nominate some candidates . . . by the direct primary;" and you cite Maryland as an example. But the Maryland primary, as we shall soon see, is tied to the old convention system in which Baltimore City, with four-sevenths of the State's population, has only about four-fifteenths of the delegates (42 out of 149) with the rural counties enjoying a disproportionate advantage, making it quite possible for a candidate to be chosen after defeat in the primary. Similar is the situation in Georgia where the eight larger cities have only six votes each in the convention, 31 of the outside counties four and more than 100 smaller ones two each.

In Colorado a candidate must be "designated" (i. e., nominated) by a party convention before his name may appear on the party ballot in the primary; while in New York and Indiana there is no State-wide primary—only local and regional officers are so nominated. In all these States therefore the full-fledged primary has yet to arrive.

Nevertheless the majestic march of that system from south to north and across the country from west to east has been highly impressive. Long confined to the dominant party of the south, it was not until the first decade of the present century that the direct primary obtained a foothold in the Northern States. With Idaho and Utah using it for the first time this year and New Mexico prepared for it in 1940, the State-wide primary bids fair to become universal in time.

Certain defects in its operation remain to be remedied, e. g., too great a burden is imposed on the voters by the unnecessarily large number of elective officers; but the short ballot will correct that.

The direct primary, the initiative and referendum and proportional representation are three of the most important steps yet taken toward providing that full, free and fair expression of the popular will which is the essence of real democracy. With the direct primary nearing its goal, friends of popular government should now concentrate on the other two.

Pusillanimous Policy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just a few words to express my admiration for and complete agreement with your September 24 editorial "Speaking of Betrayals." My regret is that it can't be emblazoned across every newspaper of the land to impress upon the Nation the consciousness of a nation's obligations among nations.

It is not the fault of any one of our governments or of the Republicans or of the Democrats per se that our foreign policies are pusillanimous. The fault lies with the national temper of the people continually reminded by the short-sighted and selfish individuals among the politicians of the warnings issued by our first President.

Time alone will tell whether this policy of political isolationalism is justified. On the same basis of thought we might follow it further and continue our isolationism in in other fields as well. A parallelism would be found if the Red Cross, let's say, would shrug its shoulders at suffering outside of our country. Or why not withdraw all our business interests and our Government representatives and refuse any dealings at all with foreign countries? No, Americans want all of the profits but none of the dangers.

Though the Nation at large does not want to go to war, and what nation does, it still thrills in pride to a strong international policy. But when the Nation is slapped in the face by Japan, and we take it and like it, and when our nationals in other countries are told by our Government through its agents that it is in effect their own tough luck if they leave our shores and get into trouble, and outside of our own country we need expect no great help from Uncle Sam, one is inclined to feel ashamed of our great Nation.

Although we rail at Mussolini and Hitler, the direct cause of their ascension to power was the weak vacillating, unco-operative bickering actress of their legislators that laid the stage for a strong man to arise and unify all interests in a common cause for the glory of the state. That such a contigency should arise in our country is not wholly without the bounds of probability. M. F. OTTMAN, M. D.

The Southern Poll Tax

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Washington Post of September 20, is a report of Mr. Simon Michlet's interesting discussion of the possible curtailment of the South's strength in the Democratic convention of 1940. If the national Democratic convention should adopt a rule similar to that of its Republican rival, limiting the number of delegates to each State according to the effective Democratic vote in the last election rather than according to population quota, the South would find itself greatly embarrassed. It would find its voting strength greatly restricted. This would be wholly apart from the cunning devices and tricky contrivances to exclude the Negro from the franchise in contravention of the plain letter and spirit of the Constitution.

Such limitation of delegates to the national convention of both parties is logically justified and politically expedient. A party does not represent all the people of the State, but only those who subscribe to the party tenets and principles. Therefore representation in the national council of the party should be limited, not by the population of the State, but by the number of party adherents. Both parties are in the habit of granting nominal representation to the District of Columbia and the Territories, where none of the citizens vote.

It is logically sound and politically expedient for any national party to apportion delegates on the basis of its voting strength. Let us by forced logic assume that there is not a single Republican in a given State; should such a State be allowed representation in the national Republican convention in proportion to its population?

It is ridiculous as well as embarrassing for the South with no Republican votes in the electoral college to dictate the nominees, whose election depends wholly upon Northern votes. The Democratic party is approaching the same predicament though perhaps to a less glaring degree. If the State of Vermont justly claims a large proportion of representatives in the Republican national convention than South Carolina, because it has a larger number of Republican voters, why shouldn't New Jersey plan a like preference over the State of Mississippi on the Democratic side of the fence. Why should the nine poll-tax States, where only 24 per cent of the potential voters go to the polls, be accorded the same representative weight in either convention as the 39 States free from poll tax, where 72 per cent of the citizens over 21 years of age avail themselves of their voting privilege.

The Southern States impose the poll tax with the expectation that it would effectively disfranchise the Negroes rather than poor whites. As a matter of fact more whites are self-disfranchised by neglect and disinclination than Negroes by legal disability.

It would certainly prove a boomerang if the South found itself seriously handicapped in council of the Democratic Party by reason of cunning devices calculated to disenfranchise the Negro.

Acquisition By Purchase

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Regarding the world's great problems, and uncertainties, Mr. Hitler's work for unification of the "Fatherland" must not be forgotten. In furtherance now of the same, why not the American (U. S.) way of acquiring desired territory by purchase, and with pursuance of the "Good Neighbor Policy," include further study of the Tenth Commandment?

Ex Libris

MY FRIEND who has a bookshop said to me the other day, "I guess I must hold a clearance sale. I like to run a bookstore, but I hate to run a junk shop. There's too much tripe on my shelves, and it's time I got rid of some of it."

And I could see that he was serious. He is a man who has a great feeling for books. Probably that is why he is a bookseller. He knows that a good book is "the precious life-blood of a master-spirit." "I feel about bad books," he said, "as Hendrik Willem Van Loon once said of bad whisky, "I see no reason why we should drink it when there is so much good.'"

I began to think what a pity it is that all booksellers are not booklovers as well. (I judge that they aren't chiefly by a few telltale things they say and do when they are waiting on me.) And what a pity that all booklovers can't be booksellers, for did you ever know of a real booklover who didn't dream of having a bookshop of his own?

There is a vast difference, too, between a booklover and a bookworm. The booklover is never satisfied until he owns his book. He patronizes the multitudinous circulating libraries only through the exigencies of circumstance. The bookworm is undiscriminatingly "librivorous;" he has no yearning to accumulate a library; books for him are very pleasant, perhaps stimulative, but ephemeral comestibles. The appetite of the booklover, however, is quite another thing. It was once described by the English philosopher, William Godwin, in this wise: "He that revels in a well-chosen library has innumerable dishes, and all of admirable flavour. His taste is rendered so acute as easily to distinguish the nicest shade of difference."

I think of George Gissing as my idea of a true booklover. His love of books was not in proportion to the ability to buy them, for he was painfully poor; and in one of his early essays he wrote:

"It is a joy to go through booksellers' catalogues, ticking here and there a possible purchase. Formerly, when I could seldom spare money, I kept catalogues as much as possible out of sight; now I savour them page by page and make a pleasant virtue of the discretion I must needs impose upon myself. But greater still is the happiness of unpacking volumes which one has bought without seeing them. I am no hunter of rarities; I care nothing for first editions and for tall copies; what I buy is literature, food for the soul of man. The first glimpse of bindings when the inmost wrapper has been folded back! The first gleam of a gilded title! Here is a work the name of which has been known for half a lifetime, but which I never yet saw; I take it reverently in my hand, gently I open it; my eyes are dim with excitement as I glance over chapter headings and anticipate the treat which awaits me."

Sentimentally, you say. Yet what a delightful and lovable crowd of sentimentalists there have been. There was Charles Lamb. "I own," he said, "that I am disposed to say grace upon 20 other occasions in the course of the day besides my dinner . . . Why have we none for books, those spiritual repasts—a grace before Milton—a grace before Shakespeare—a devotional exercise proper to be said before reading the Fairy Queen?"

And who doesn't cherish the remembrance of Mr. Roger Mifflin, the remarkable proprietor of the Haunted Bookshop as conceived in the exuberant imagination of Christopher Morley? On a wall of Mr. Mifflin's shop on Gissing street in Brooklyn was hanging this placard:

"This shop is haunted by the ghosts
Of all great literature, in hosts;
We sell no fakes or trashes.
Lovers of books are welcome here,
No clerks will babble in your ear,
Please smoke—but don't drop ashes!"

George Gissing, Charles Lamb, Roger Mifflin—you can make your own list of booklovers, but be sure not to get any bookworms or strictly book collectors in the bunch. You will have little trouble in recognizing your booklover; there is always in him that quality best described perhaps by the word "human"—a quality that evoked this gem from the epigrammatic Mr. Mifflin, "If I were ever very ill I would only need to say to myself, 'You can't die yet, you haven't read King Lear.' That would bring me around. I know it would."

Death Of An Eagle

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent edition of your paper there appeared a picture of two Fairfax policemen holding a dead eagle extended between them by its wings. The fact that these men had killed such a rare bird, fast becoming extinct, made the picture most shocking and revolting to anyone who is even slightly interested in the preservation of wild life. It does seem wholly unnecessary that this renowned bird, emblematical of our country, and lauded in story and verse, should have met such a miserable death at the hands of law officers who should have set a better example. How much better it would have been to have protected the eagle; perhaps his mate may have been in the vicinity trying to build a nest and make a home on a rocky hillside to raise their young for the admiration of visitors and the education of the children. How cruel to kill this inoffensive bird who asked only to be left in peace to live his life in his natural way. Now his body is probably embalmed and his killing looked upon as quite an achievement. A greater achievement would be to try ot replace the noble bird.

Victors Too Lenient

IT SEEMS TO BE generally agreed by now that the Treaty of Versailles was a great tragedy, but recently history gives reason to regret the lenience rather than the severity of the terms. After all, the Germans got out of the war without the destruction of a stick or stone in their own country. There has been no mass deportations of their people, no wanton murder of the mayors of their villages or other hostages in reprisal for natural acts of patriotic resistance against invasion, no mass burglary of their homes or systematic destruction of their factories.

This has been the experience of Belgium and northern France at the hands of the Germans, but as soon as the fighting was over the allies, surveying the damage and the records of cold-blooded vandalism, found that they lacked the brutality to pay the Germans in their own coin.

IT WOULD HAVE DONE the world and civilization no good to destroy two German villages for every Belgium or French village leveled in the war or to execute by firing squad two German mayors for every hostage killed by the Kaiser's armies.

But the Versailles Treaty has done the world no good, and it is childish to argue or hope that the world would have been any better off today if the conditions of Versailles, which since then have been condemned as vindictive, had been omitted.

The error of Versailles was that Germany was allowed to escape all feeling of the damage that was inflicted on the invaded country.

The allies attempted to collect lawful damages from a slippery defendant who first tried to argue that it had not been his fault and then went into bankruptcy to avoid payment.

BUT, ASIDE from material considerations, Germany never was made to feel war. If the conquerors had carried out deliberately and laboriously on the German countryside the same wanton destruction that the Germans inflicted, if they had gone through the German factories looting and smashing, if they had pillaged German homes of their furniture, bedding and all the personal possessions that make a home and shipped the stuff to Belgium and France and then had blown up those factories and homes before the eyes of the people, the lesson would have been more impressive.

It is unfair to hold against the French politicians and people of the post-war period the charge of stupid vindictiveness. Any people who had suffered so would have wanted revenge, and history has now shown that it was a mistake to forego revenge. The French were too easily dissuaded, but they were right all the time.

TWENTY YEARS LATER Germany revives more shockingly brutal than ever before and inflicts upon the Czechs the same conditions of loot and mass deportation that the allies forebore to impose on Germany. Remembering what his own country did to the French territory, Hitler took precautions to prevent the Czechs from doing the same in the Sudeten country as they withdrew.

It is a tragedy that they could not blow up all the military works, demolish all houses, factories and shops and shoot against the wall numerous selected leaders of the German sedition in their country as they fell back, not for any good that this might have done them or for any service to right and justice but merely to hamper Hitler and impress upon the Nazis the horrors of war.

GERMANY CAME out of the big war with nothing worse than some hunger and humiliation, and now that the Treaty of Versailles has been completely unwritten the upshot of that great war is that the victors gave the party and suffered all the damage. Germany will never learn to hate war until a war is fought on German soil.

O'Conor Spent $69,000 to Win Nomination in Md.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 4 (AP).—Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor's successful campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination cost $69,263, and left a deficit of $6,798, Joseph Rogan, his campaign treasurer, reported to the Baltimore Circuit Court today.

The largest single contributor was Howard Bruce, Maryland national committeeman, who gave $6,000. P. Watson Webb, Cambridge publisher who unsuccessfully raced for the controller nomination, gave $2,500.

Clarence W. Miles, his campaign manager, and William Curran, his political adviser, gave $1,000 each. O'Conor, himself, and William H. Labrot, gave $2,000 each. Other contributors were George Sellmayer, $750; Hooper S. Miles, John Mackall and Thomas d'Alesandro, $500 each.

Pension Utopias

By Ernest K. Lindley

Both Parties Embarrassed

THE VIGOR of the old-age pension movement, as expressed in a variety of resplendent schemes, is causing the national committees of both parties more embarrassment than they officially acknowledge. Mr. Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee, has tried to pass off the $30-every-Thursday plan to which the Democratic nominee for Senator in California is committed with the urbane suggestion that it is just a vote-catching device. Mr. Michelson's worldliness has prompted Mr. Franklyn Waltman, his opposite in the Republican National Committee, to make some spirited observations on political morality.

By dexterous juggling of Mr. Michelson, Thurman, Arnold, Hitler's "Mein Kampf" and a few sentences from a 1932 speech by Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mr. Waltman arrives somehow at the familiar conclusion that the promises of Mr. Roosevelt and other New Dealers can't be relied upon. The unstated implication of Mr. Waltman's warning is that you can rely on the promises of Republican (and perhaps anti-New Deal Democratic) office-seekers, who, it is well known, include a number of advocates of fancy old-age pension schemes. Without severe stretching, Mr. Waltman's words can be read as a subtle hint that if you really want a bigger old-age pension, you had better vote Republican.

HOWEVER, ANYONE who knows the economics of both Mr. Waltman and Mr. Michelson will gladly exculpate them of intent to abet the Townsend plan or any of its glittering alternatives. The trouble seems to be that various candidates for the Senate and House, and various State offices, in both major parties have either pledged themselves to these schemes or spoken indulgently of them. For either national committee to make an issue of this tendency amounts to no more than the pot calling the kettle cracked.

Various commentators have written of the "revival" of the old age pension clamor. This "revival" may be no more than the unliquidated remnant of the movement which swept through the country in 1934, 1935, and 1936. There is nothing to indicate that it has the sweep or the fervor of the original Townsend movement. The $30-every-Thursday plan looks like a warmover hash of the simpler ingredients of two earlier California-bred panaceas: the Townsend Old Age Revolving Pension scheme and Upton Sinclair's 1934 EPIC plan.

IN ONE SECTOR, at least, the pension movement seems to be in disorderly retreat. That is in Colorado, where the $45-a-month plan written into the constitution thoroughly snarled the State's finances, proved unworkable, and is now before the voters for repeal. In other States the pension tide seems still to be rising. North Dakota, which hasn't been able to raise enough money for a $30-a-month pension, is about to vote on a constitutional amendment providing for $40-a-month.

Although they mingle in some of the schemes, there are two separate elements in the pension movement. There is, first, the simple demand for adequate pensions for old people. Secondly, there are the more elaborate schemes for general economic recovery based on pensions. The Townsend plan was presented not merely as a means of taking care of the aged quite handsomely but as a complete economic panacea. The fertility of the American imagination being what it is, short cuts to Utopia are bound to spring up. When times are bad, they will win adherents.

THE PARTICULAR task of meeting the justifiable demand for old-age pensions has been begun under the social security act. That act took some of the wind out of the sails of the pension movement in 1935 and 1936. It is a fair supposition that if the old-age provisions were broadened, the movement would lose much of its remaining impetus. The Social Security Board and its advisory council have been working for more than a year on proposals for extending the coverage of the old-age insurance sections of the act. They are under orders from the President to submit specific recommendations before Congress convenes in January.

Mr. Roosevelt on April 28 asked the Social Security Board to consider five proposals for liberalizing the old-age insurance system. The first of these was extension of the coverage. Seamen, employes of private charitable, religious and educational institutions, and a few other groups can be included without difficulty. The inclusion of domestic employes, farm labor, and self-employed workers is more troublesome for administrative reasons but probably can be achieved by the use of a stamp tax.

THE SECOND PROPOSAL was that benefits be provided for the aged wives and widows of insured workers. The third was that benefits be extended to the young children of insured persons who died before reaching the retirement age. Fourthly, the President proposed that the payment of annuities be begun earlier than January 1, 1942, the date now set by law. And, fifthly, he suggested that the benefits during the early years of the system be made larger.

These strictly non-utopian proposals, if enacted, ought to reduce the steam pressure behind the wilder pension schemes—and incidentally relieve the national committees of both parties of a mind-twisting and soul-trying perplexity.

Refugees

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 4 (AP). The Swiss Federal Council ruled today that Jewish refugees entering Germany hereafter must have Swiss visas on their passports.

The step was taken to tighten up on the influx of refugees into the confederation.

The council warned that "because of the great number of emigrants already in Switzerland it is recalled that Switzerland can only be a transit country for them and that all lucrative activity is forbidden them during their temporary stay in our country."

The council further ruled that "even the acquisition of buildings or participation in Swiss commercial enterprises does not confer the right to remain in Switzerland."

German citizens hitherto have not been required to have visas. The new measure applies to "holders of German passports, who are not Aryans according to German law."

BY TO see Nelson Loomis, the U. S. Travel Bureau's director, and learned that he is on the West Coast. By the time the next Congress meets, properly to give the young bureau the start it needs, Loomis—whose efforts are Herculean—will have the tourist ball rolling. You should knew him:

Tall, big-shouldered (he once was a college boxing champ, and later played parts in the movies) he has, through his own will, made the U. S. Government travel conscious. He came here from association with Former Ambassador Gerard, who is now in the New York travel office of the Government, and spends some 15 to 18 hours a day helping the National Government co-operate with State governments in stimulating travel.

Also, they want more travel in our own national parks, and considering that nearly every State has some travel office or another, the Federal Government is looking to the next Congress to provide what every foreign country has—a permanent clearing house for tourist information and a place of stimulus for travel.

In the few spare moments Loomis finds, he sits at home, painting pictures of mountains and all the ranges he lived among in the West not so long ago.

A native of Iowa, she received training in botany and related subjects at the Iowa State Agricultural College. They gave her an M. S. Later, studies were pursued at the University of Chicago. ### Defenselessness Of Democracy

SEVERAL YEARS ago Charles Augustus Lindbergh made a prophetic remark. "Airplanes will outlaw war." I am inclined to think that this last week we may really have seen armed conflict between nations outlawed.

Certainly we have seen something happen which is unique in all history. With two nations completely mobilized and five nations partially mobilized—although exactly what Russia did is a dark secret—peace was made. At least, the armed conflict was called off.

Some people say it was called off because the preponderance of force was on the side of Germany. In terms of any preceding war, this is certainly not true.

• • • •

SOME PEOPLE SAY it was called off because the pro-German group, the so-called Cliveden set, won the upper hand with Chamberlain. I think that is true, though to exactly what extent, and how, we cannot judge. For despite the enormous publicity made possible by the radio, despite the fact that we could "listen in" on Prague and Berlin and London, the most essential facts in the whole business are still hidden from the peoples of the world.

Some say that the inner disintegration and disunity in France was the decisive factor. That, too, unquestionably placed a role.

Yet, more important than any of these, was probably the truth of Col. Lindbergh's prophesy. Airplanes have ended armed strife between nations.

• • • •

AERIAL WARFARE is warfare without any possibility of real victory. It is warfare waged not between armies but against populations. It is totalitarian warfare and in case of armed conflict must be fought on the soil of every combatant. No war, whatever the odds, can be confined to any territory. In the last war Germany attacked Belgium, and although Germany lost the war she managed to keep it off German soil.

In any future war that will be completely impossible. No matter which country is the victor, its cities, its towns, its communications, will be laid waste and its populations will be either destroyed or condemned to live, like moles, underground.

Since the experience of Spain, which may possibly live in history as actually the test war to end war, we know that the "blitzkrieg" theory of Gen. Goering—that a swift and fearful air attack can be made which will totally demoralize populations—is no longer tenable.

• • • •

AERIAL WARFARE is not swift, but slow. Populations are not demoralized. They get used to it. Like prisoners condemned to long sentences who eventually find prison a way of life, people under air attack find ways to protect themselves and become accustomed to constant risk and the imminence of death.

Armies can be defeated. Populations cannot. They can only be exterminated. That takes a long, long time.

Meanwhile, everything over their heads is slowly destroyed, so that eventually victory means the inheritance of a waste.

• • • •

ARMED CONFLICT, therefore, in the modern world is reduced to something resembling the old battles between Chinese tribes who covered their faces with the most horrible masks they could devise and tested which group could first frighten the other into surrender.

Hitler said the other day—by now I have forgotten just where—that the imminent conflict would be a test of nerves, "and ours are better." He was right. The nerves of the democracies gave way first.

• • • •

IT WOULD BE interesting, and possibly useful, to explore the reason for this, and perhaps later we shall.

Just now, there is something else to be said.

I gather from the mail that I have received in the last three weeks and from the happy speeches that I have heard from various parts of the earth, that people cherish the happy illusion that if armed conflict ends conquest will end with it.

This week we have seen it demonstrated that conquest does not end with armed conflict. A new weapon of conquest has been forged, and this weapon is far more menacing to democracy than armies ever were.

• • • •

THE NEW WEAPON of conquest is revolution. The new weapon is the coup d'etat, engineered inside the country that is to be dominated.

The total failure of governments to grasp this essential fact about the new warfare and the incompatibility of democracy with any adequate defensive measures, is what is, with extreme rapidity, determining the fate of the democracies.

This defensive weapon of this new warfare is dictatorship at home. The offensive weapons are propaganda and political organization abroad. The menace of actual war is a terroristic weapon, flaunted but not used.

The first and most important instrument of defense, for Germany—to take an example—is not the Siegfried line or any other engineering device.

The first instrument of defense is the controlled radio and press and the ruthless suppression of all except the uniform political organization.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to permeate the dictatorships with any sort of democratic propaganda. It is impossible, for instance, to circulate in Germany appeals for the sort of international economic organization put forward by Mr. Van Zeeland. Or appeals for the sort of peace so often projected by Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Hull.

It is obviously impossible to set up on German soil an organization to be called, let us say, "the bund of admirers of Thomas Jefferson." And it is quite out of the question that the American Embassy should start card-cataloguing the names of everybody who has relatives in the United States and begin to put pressure upon them in the interests of American foreign policy.

The aggressive instrument—propaganda and politican organization—can only be used openly against democracy because only democracies have civil liberties.

WHEN THE FASCIST powers attempt to do the same stunt in Russia there are wholesale purges. Or when the Soviet dictatorship attempts to do the same thing in Germany its agents are swiftly and silently disposed of.

But democracy, by its very nature, entertains the invaders, unless it can pin upon them the charge of "spy" or "high treason."

These charges it cannot make, according to democratic interpretations. For the invaders invariably attach themselves to already existing groups inside the democratic countries with the object of exacerbating already existing disunities and hostilities.

THE GOAL IS to create disunity, cast doubt upon existing institutions, promote extremism, and thus so weaken the democracies that they drop out of the world picture as important forces with which to reckon and quail before the threat of force for fear of internal revolution.

This process can go so far that an actual coup d'etat is achieved. By this process the very governments of outside powers can be, and have been, captured . . . So far not one by the Communists, but several by the Fascists, and against this process the democratic governments are utterly defenseless. They are disarmed by their very nature. They are easy prey of "bloodless" conquest.

Therefore the end of armed conflict will not assist the democracies, but will deprive them of the only weapon they have left—unless they can speedily devise some new ones.

Says Hitler Got All

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial in the issue of September 30, you conclude, among other things, that Hitler was forced to yield at Munich and that "Germany, confronted with a real alliance against aggression, sharply modified what first were termed irreducible demands." Just what did Hitler yield?

At Godesberg he demanded (1) evacuation of Sudetenland by October 1; (2) a plebiscite, to be held under an international commission to decide the future of other Czechoslovak areas. At Munich he got (1) evacuation of Sudetenland to begin October 1; evacuation of four minor areas to be completed by October 10; details of evacuation to be determined by an international commission consisting of Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Czechslovakia; (2) the commission to determine regions in which plebiscites will be held; (3) Britain and France to guarantee the new boundaries of Czechoslovakia.

Thus Hitler got practically all that he had sought at Godesberg.

Germany was confronted with no alliance against aggression. Rather, the stage was set at Munich by Chamberlain and Mussolini and Daladier to facilitate the path of the aggressor.

A real alliance against aggression could be brought about only by means of a conference such as that advocated by President Roosevelt, a conference of all interested parties in some neutral spot. Such a conference would include Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union. Let such a conference be called by President Roosevelt. It is only at such a conference that the rising chorus of protest by the people of the world against the betrayal at Munich could make itself heard. It is only at such a conference that further Nazi aggression could be stopped.

In Reply to Dr. Lang

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of The Post, Dr. Anton Lang, professor of German language and literature at Georgetown University, was quoted as saying that Germany "needed the territory and raw materials of Bohemia" and so, inferentially, was in the right in her aggression against the Czechs.

This is a typical German viewpoint, but coming from one of the Oberammergau passion players, son of the great Christus, it is more than surprising. It is revolting and detestable, as is the whole German attitude and tactics.

I hope that all Americans who loath Hitler's loaded pistol diplomacy—and I believe they constitute the vast majority—will not only stay from Oberammergau in 1940 but will exclude Germany from their travels and boycott everything German until the wild beasts in human form who dominate that country have been destroyed by the German people.

A Fallacious Idea

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the threat of war has temporarily subsided, it is well to bring up a problem that arose in those days of foreboding and hysteria that preceded the Munich conference when it seemed as though the world would be thrown into another bloody conflict.

Many people believe that a war against Germany would merely be a crusade to liberate the Jews from Nazi persecution and they advanced the arguments that they didn't deem it right to sacrifice millions of lives for the well-being of the Jews. Such an idea is wholly fallacious and springs either from a sense of ignorance, a lack of perception or from an innate and unconscious latent anti-Semitism. A war against the Nazi hierarchy is not only on behalf of racial Jews or theological Jewry. It is a war on behalf of Catholics, Protestants, atheists and of all other peoples who desire to live in peace and to be free from oppression.

In his suppression of minorities, the Fuehrer has not spared the Catholic Church and many times has berated the Pope for interfering and protesting against Nazi lawlessness. The Jews do not ask the world to fight for them. But mankind and humanity demand that the world democracies, those countries that still respect the conscience of civilization, exorcise these Fascist war lords, so that all peoples may dwell upon the earth in harmony, in friendship and in mental and physical well-being.

Our Responsibility

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is our misfortune to live at a period in world history marked in many places by a revolt against liberty, a retreat from reason, and a relapse into barbarism.

We witness in Europe the demise of democracy, the triumph of dictatorship, and the collapse of international morality. We see the steady rise of pan-German and pan-Fascist imperialism, the dissolution of the Little Entente, and the isolation of Soviet Russia. We observe the sacrifice of Czechoslovakia to a dubious peace without honor, the dominance of upper class interests in England over imperial necessity, and the complete break-down of collective security. We see nations betray their too trusting allies and the waging of a ruthless war against the West. We see two worlds in conflict, the end of which is not in sight.

These developments abroad must have the effect of driving millions of Americans, who formerly advocated international cooperation, into the isolationist camp. Many among us will now say to England and France: "You have betrayed your ally in her hour of need. Do not expect us to help you when your time comes." This attitude, of course, facilitates Hitler's strategy of divide and rule, and overlooks America's share of responsibility for what has happened in Europe.

It behooves the American people, under these tragic circumstances, to concentrate their attention upon national defense and the achievement of internal unity. We must prudently conserve, develop, and utilize our material and human resources, restoring those that have been depleted or destroyed. We must learn how to reorganize our economy so as to make the fullest possible use of our productive capacity and assure every citizen an opportunity to earn a decent living. We must promote the psychological reintegration of all elements in American ideal of a strong, well-managed country with healthy, well-educated, normal citizens.

In these and other ways must America gird her loins to strengthen democracy and liberty in a hostile world.

Russia May Be Right

To the Editor, of the Post—Sir: With the lifting of the European war cloud we see the English and German cousins pledged nevermore to fight one another and the formidable western Czechoslovak defenses in German hands. With Hungary an ally and Poland an open road, there is no longer any serious obstacle to the long-heralded 'Drang nach Osten.'

Did Chamberlain walk blindly into a trap, or was he a party to its setting? That is a question for Britain's underprivileged to mull over, and their brothers throughout the world, especially in Spain and China, to ponder as to consequences. They are not striving for 'a place in the sun', but for their proper share in the earth free of the blight of landlordism.

Whatever may be thought of Russia's experiment in other respects, here is the only land entirely free of this blight. The example she has set the world in this is, more than any other, the cause of the hostility of the totalitarian states and certain elements in the so-called democratic states as well. The Russians may well be right in saying that the present is but a short respite from the inevitable.

"An Old And Feeble Man"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The independence of The Washington Post and its correspondents on foreign and domestic affairs are greatly admired by close observers of current events. Permit me to state my views of the blundering foreign policy of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain.

Mr. Chamberlain is an old and feeble man, and we must notice what the psychological effect one man's mind has over the other when they meet. On the other hand, Mr. Hitler is vigorous mentally and physically and a keen observer to perceive at once what an easy victim he was dealing with when he met Mr. Chamberlain; hence the quick betrayal of Czechoslovakia.

The Czechoslovak people did not expect England and France to fight just for them, but they did expect these two powers to fight for their own preservation while there was a better chance to win than there will be at some future time, probably not far distant.

Mr. Chamberlain together with Italy and Germany offers to guarantee the new Czechoslovak frontiers. What that guarantee means to Italy and Germany we can easily judge from the events of the last five years. What treaties have the Italians and Germans respected during the last five years? JOSEPH PRYMEK.

"The Issue For America"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My wife and I wish to commend strongly your leading article in The Post of October 1 entitled "The Issue for America." We feel it lays down in a penetrating way the fundamentals of the situation as it exists today and shows the path the American people must follow, in spite of any danger it may offer, if they wish to maintain their moral integrity.

We believe, also, that in this crisis the President has shown commendable initiative and courage and should receive the praise of all thinking people, against the protests of unthinking and emotional or cowardly or selfish folk who imagine that we can or should isolate ourselves from the living world of the present.

We know that you will continue to offer sound and discerning comment on the affairs of the world from day to day, and so give the citizens of America an inspiration to go forward in the difficult climb of the way toward a greater measure of justice to others and righteousness among ourselves, so laying a sound foundation for ultimate peace in the world.

In Defense Of Wilson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently I have noticed editorials in the newspapers criticizing former President Woodrow Wilson's ideals during his reign in the White House. Wilson was a man of ability. He did not put us in that last great conflict because any person with common sense knows it takes an act of Congress to permit such. As for the League of Nations it would seem that we would have been better off if we had followed this procedure.

Wilson entered the White House a man, full of pep, integrity, and ability. He left broken in health and heart, from the criticism and accusations hurled at him because he put us in war. No, Wilson did not put us in war but our American investors in Europe did. Money and American interests in Europe instigated the entrance. President Wilson was in a position similar to President Lincoln. Any Chief Executive whose nation is at war whether at home or abroad is to be pitied rather than censored.

In years to come Wilson's ethics will come to light, Why didn't we follow his policies? Why couldn't we see ahead of our nose. Wilson was a man you couldn't dictate to. And you better thank your stars you have another in the White House today who has the earmarks of a Wilson—Franklin Roosevelt.

Cold-Blooded Action Is 'Spawn of the North'

Excitement Runs High in Film of North
Afterthoughts on 'Abe Lincoln'
News and Notes of the Theater

IF it is action, love, suspense, comedy, gore and thrills you are after in your cinema fare, nothing could more copiously fill the order than Paramount's production of "Spawn of the North," coming to the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday as the successor to "Boys Town." No two pictures, incidentally, could be in more strikingly vivid contrast.

BELL.

In something over three decades of reasonably continuous screen-gazing, I have seen some pretty explosive pictures, but never anything punctuated with such terrific scenes of physical combat and convulsions of nature as the horrendous debacles that mark the successive climaxes of this film story of Northern waters and iron men.

There somehow linger a few nebulous suspicions that some of the cracking up of the icebergs and glaciers that thunder into the celluloid now and again may be "clips" from some one or another of Dr. Kleinschmidt's stirring nature studies in the Arctic, but Paramount must have made up those fights out if its own head. That famous personal battle in the recurrent filming of "The Spoilers" seems like a seminary pillow fight in comparison with the skull-cracking and face-gouging that goes on when the advocates of law and order go to bat with the fish poachers.

In case it hasn't been guessed, yesterday's preview of "Spawn of the North" disclosed it to be the familiar Vigilantes tale of the old days of the Wild West translated into terms of the Alaskan salmon runs. Through the instrumentality of George Raft, Henry Fonda, John Barrymore, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Lamour, Louise Platt, Fuzzy Knight and a few dozen other stalwarts, not forgetting Henry Hathaway's direction, the Arctic fishing banks are converted from a battlefield into a comparatively safe outlet for legitimate commercial enterprise. It took a tremendous amount of harpoon-fire, gunnery and marli-spike-swinging to bring this happy consummation about.

But "Spawn of the North" is not all blood-letting, even so. The breaking up of the towering ice floes, in its way, is comparable in the magnificence of its awful spectacle to the earthquake in "San Francisco," the storm in "The Hurricane" or the holocaust in "In Old Chicago." A lot colder than any of them, no doubt.

Those who remember "The Spoilers," as their favorite screen yarn of rugged men in a raw country will find it backed off the board by this latest burst of primitive melodramatics.

To offset the "Spawn of the North's" sanguinary drenching, two of the screen's most competent comedians are given important places in the action. One is Lynne Overman, former Washington stock player; the other is "Slicker." "Slicker" has all the edge. "Slicker" is a trained seal. But I mean TRAINED. He does practically everything but talk. And, at that, the noises he makes are as intelligible to the casual ear as the Siwash gibberish and Russian jargon that bob up occasionally in the film. "Slicker," by his work in this picture, takes his place right up there in the front line with Charlie McCarthy and Donald Duck among the cinema's "freak" artists.

This column finds itself out of agreement with those who hold that the "covered wagon" scene in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" is unnecessary to the fully rounded perfection of a superb play. It is our view that this brief interval in the drama that was revealed for the first time on any stage in the National Theater on Monday night serves a valuable purpose. It is the scene in which Lincoln prays for the deliverance of a small boy, desperately ill in the prairie miles from medical aid. In combination with Lincoln's later speech in which he remarks that Seth Gale and his wife and son have reached Oregon safely and in good health, it seems to me that the prayer episode supplies the complete answer to the subsequent charge of the Rev. Barrick that Lincoln is ineligible as a candidate for the Presidency because he is an infidel. It furnishes just one more bond of sympathy between the audience and a great spirit gradually approaching the supreme test—and immortality.

We feel, too, that the drama desks were a trifle precipitate and premature in accolading Helen Claire for having delivered herself of the longest part ever written in Clare Boothe's acidly frothy comedy of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." Raymond Massey's role in "Abe Lincoln" is infinitely more exacting and more exhausting, even if it is not actually longer. It was a magnificent performance of it that Mr. Massey gave on Monday night, despite the inevitable tension attendant upon every premiere.

There is one point upon which your reporter can find no fair ground for quibbling. I counted 15 curtain calls following the last act to 14 clocked by other excited observers. But I never was any good at arithmetic. Or perhaps I thought I was receiving the change, instead of making it!

George M. Cohen celebrated the inauguration of his road tour in "I'd Rather Be Right" in Philadelphia Monday night, by beating the records for opening night receipts theretofore held by Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina" and Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." An advance sale of $35,000—as heralded here some days ago—greeted the Sam H. Harris star in the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart satire, presaging a total approximating $60,000 for the fortnight's engagement. "I'd Rather Be Right" follows the Maxwell Anderson-Kurt Weill musical comedy, "Knickerbocker Holiday," starring Walter Huston, at the National week after next.

Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, who rule over the destines of the Little Theater, were reminded yesterday that Pare Lorentz's "The River" was an exceedingly fine film, of its kind, and so added it to the bill currently featuring Irene Dunne and Cary Grant in a revival of "The Awful Truth."

The reminder came in the form of advices from abroad that the International Cinema Exposition, held annually in Venice, has awarded the highest prize in the documentary classification to "The River." The award was made after an international jury had chosen "The River" as the best of 71 subjects entered in competition.

A silver plaque, emblematic of the award, is now on its way to this country for presentation through diplomatic representatives of the Italian Government to Mr. Lorentz and the Farm Security Administration of the United States Department of Agriculture, the agency for which the picture was produced.

Majorie Gainsworth, previously announced as a featured artiste on the stage program to be offered at Loew's Capitol Theater beginning Friday, will be replaced by another songstress, in the person of Ethel Shepard, recently described by a famous New York columnist as a "warbler who gets in your ears and not your hair." In recent months, Miss Shepard has appeared as guest artiste on numerous network broadcasts, among them Fred Allen's. She is the daughter of a theatrical family, her parents being known to the stage as the team of Shepard and King. So now you know.

Reverting momentarily to "Abe Lincoln in Illinois"—as practically everybody will be from now on—the new Sherwood play will be presented for the first three days of next week in Baltimore, whence it will proceed directly to New York, opening Saturday night, October 15, in the Plymouth Theater.

It was the consensus of opinion of Lee Shubert, Max Gordon and other theatrical moguls in attendance at Monday night's opening at the National that the piece is good for a season's run on Broadway. At least.

A word of cheer for the patrons of the Gayety Theater: Hinda Wasau, one of the first of burlesque's display artistes, will be the star of the goings-on on Ninth street next week. Hinda holds the house record with 14 performances—before the time of three shows a day—to the absolute standing-room capacity of the house.

Archaeological Note

Who remembers when Washington used to have five legitimate theater openings on Monday night, instead of one—and all of them packed? Heigho!

'Youth Takes a Fling'—at Cooking?

JOEL McCREA AND ANDREA LEEDS,

as they appear in the costellar roles of Universal's new production of "Youth Takes a Fling," scheduled to open a week's engagement on the screen at the RKO-Keith's Theater tomorrow. This will be the chief feature of a bill that also will include a new issue of the "March of Time" and the tenth anniversary Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, "The Brave Little Tailor."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 4.—After spending billions of dollars and words for the glory of motion pictures in the nearly 50 years since its beginning, the industry has developed two geniuses: Charlie Chaplin and Walt Disney. Walt celebrated his tenth anniversary the other night by showing us 80 shorts. When a child reaches the age of 10 we're planning its future, but in ten years Walt has reached such a stage of perfection that you ask yourself "What next?"

HEDDA HOPPER

He started with Mickey Mouse. Now, Mickey is least interesting of the new ones. Mickey as "The Brave Little Tailor" was a little like our fading stars trying to hold on against great odds. Not that he wasn't good, but others are fresher and newer. My favorite was "The Ugly Duckling," the homely little fowl, which becomes beautiful when the White Swan adopts it. It runs but nine minutes. You could see it 90 minutes and still get a lesson from it. A satire of parenthood. Mother, resigned—waiting on nest. Papa showing off—just as real ones do in corridors of hospitals to impress nurses and doctors, as though they were bearing the pain.

I thought of Marie Dressler, born an ugly duckling. School children in her little town in Canada would have nothing to do with her. She wrote a book about it—and called herself the ugly duckling. When she died she had won her way to fame in the most cruel city in the world.

"Mother Goose Goes Hollywood" will give you greater laughs, but "The Ugly Duckling" will stick in your memory long after you've forgotten the brilliant satire of Katharine Hepburn and all our Hollywood show-offs. Everyone will laugh at Mother Goose, except Hepburn. I have a feeling she won't care for it. It was made more than a year ago, before Katie slipped. I don't believe Disney would do it today. There isn't a cruel streak in him.

All the voices were done perfectly, with the exception of Charlie McCarthy. A ventriloquist must have a different tone box, because no other voice than Bergen's can do Charlie, which proves that he, like Disney, stands alone and can't be imitated.

"Ferdinand the Bull" is the first story Disney ever bought. The idea of a bull being content to sit under a tree, smelling flowers instead of fighting is grand to begin with. Ladies can get ideas from bull fighters' hats. Imagine getting your fashions from a cartoon!

And the "Farmyard Symphony" doing its turn of opera will kill you. I'd advise you not to see the picture before going to opera; it might taint your taste for it.

Montgomery Heads Settle Feud in Office

2 Clerks Quarrelled Court Fight Loomed Warrants Withdrawn

Montgomery County commissioners acted as peacemakers at their weekly meeting in Rockville yesterday, persauding two employes of their own office to settle their differences without legal action.

The case involved an altercation last week between Mrs. Beverley Wiltshire and John T. Williams, clerks in the office of the board, which resulted in each swearing out a warrant charging the other with assaut. The warrants were issued and the cases scheduled for trial in the courthouse Friday, but both agreed yesterday to withdraw the warrants and the case now is considered closed.

The commissioners also endeavored to straighten out a difficulty that has arisen over an attempt to prevent the two county farm women's markets from selling cream more than 18 hours old.

In a conference with Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, the board learned that the law regulating the sale of cream emanates from the State, and hence is out of county control. An effort to have an exception made in this county for the benefit of local dealers will be made at once.

The board approves payment of $2,892.32 to the welfare board for the month of October, the sum covering $1,453.20 for old age assistance, $862.44 for aid to dependent children, $155.90 for needy blind, $50 for funerals and $370.97 for administrative expense.

Dr. Schmitt Speaks

Use of railroad connections into Washington to eliminate traffic congestion and parking problems for suburban Maryland residents employed in the District was proposed to the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce at its first fall meeting in the Bethesda County Building.

The suggestion was advanced by Dr. Waldo Schmitt, curator of marine invertebrates of the Smithsonian Institution, who said he had made a study of Montgomery County traffic conditions, and believed the only solution was to curtail the volume of traffic flowing into the city. He suggested utilizing the freight line now operating between Bethesda and Takoma Park for interurban passenger schedules in morning and evening hours.

The chamber also heard a traffic talk by Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District of Columbia Motor Club of the American Automobile Association.

Announcement was made by Burrell H. Marsh, chairman of the committee in charge of the annual Santa Claus lane, that work on the Christmas display would start soon.

Takoma Women Meet

A budget of $1,120.99 was adopted by the Takoma Park Women's Club at its first fall meeting yesterday at the Takoma Fire Hall, Carroll and Denwood avenues.

Mrs. Frank F. Zundel, chairman, presented the budget, which allows $115 for social service work in Montgomery and Prince Georges and for the Community Chest.

The other expenditures include housing, luncheons, federation dues, student loan fund and miscellaneous items.

Mrs. O. W. McNeese, lecturer, addressed the 200 women on "Are We Modern?" Mrs. Walter P. Harman presided.

$75 VOTED to Democrats

The sum of $75 was voted to the county Democratic campaign fund by the Silver Spring Women's Democratic Club at a meeting at the Liquor Dispensary Building.

A silver tea will be held October 16 at the home of Postmaster and Mrs. Howard Griffith from 4 to 6 p. m., to raise funds. The club also voted to sell calendars, in charge of Mrs. Helen Johnson.

Shaw Heads Veterans

At the annual meeting of Winfield Scott Schley Camp, No. 13, Spanish War Veterans, which comprises Frederick and Montgomery counties, Roger Shaw, of Rockville, was elected commander, and Hugh F. O'Donnell, of Silver Spring, junior vice commander. Berry E. Clark, also of Silver Spring, was admitted to membership.

$1,116 Spent for O'Conor

The sworn statement of John H. Gassaway, treasurer of the O'Conor Club of Montgomery County, which has been filed with the clerk of the Circuit Court for the county, shows that he received $1,116.60 and disbursed a like amount in connection with the recent primary campaign and that bills totaling $84.18 remain unpaid.

Colored G. O. P. Elects

The Montgomery County Colored Republican Club, which comprises 19 district organizations, has elected Furman Plummer president; Russell Plummer, vice president; Maude Mollroy, secretary; Lawrence Graham, assistant secretary; John Ashtor, treasurer; Grady Barnes, chaplain. The county-wide group has an aggregate membership of approximately 2,000, the president stated.

Supplies for flood sufferers in New England will be made tomorrow at a meeting of the Takoma Park branch of the American Red Cross to be held at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church at 11 a. m. A cafeteria luncheon will be served. Mrs. Frederick A. Johnston will preside.

P.-T. A. Luncheon Today

A luncheon for the benefit of the Parent-Teacher Association of St. Michael's Parochial School, Silver Spring, will be served today at 12 p. m. at the school on Montgomery avenue.

Second Md. Span Hinges on PWA Left-Over Funds

Baltimore, October 4 (AP).—The construction of a bridge over the Potomac River at Morgantown appeared to hinge on whether approved PWA allotments for Maryland take up all the money earmarked for the State.

State roads commission officials returning from a PWA Conference in Washington yesterday said that if any money is left over they might get it to aid in the $2,900,000 cost of construction. The PWA has already allotted $2,167,000 for a new bridge over the Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace.

A voice out of the past spoke words of wisdom, compassion and justice to a troubled and turbulent present in the National Theater last night.

Those words were placed in the mouth of Abraham Lincoln, not yet come to the greatness and immortality that later were to be his, and formed the basis of a profundly moving drama that brings dignity and luster early to the theater's new season of 1938. For the first time in many seasons a distinguished audience remained seated after the fall of the final curtain to shout "bravos" to the unseen author and his visible players on the stage and accord "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" 15 spontaneous and tumultuous curtain calls that were ended only by the stubborn refusal of the curtain to rise again and the raising of the house lights.

It was a "first night" such as playwrights covet, actors dream of and audiences encounter all too seldom.

Robert E. Sherwood has written "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" in three acts and 12 scenes that present in cameo vignettes the salient influences distrustful of his own capabilities, disturbed by his seeming inability to hew a place of usefulness in the world about him and bewildered by the admiration of friends who perceived in the rugged honesty of his character qualities of which he was not consciously aware; a Lincoln abashed in the presence of love, brave in the face of physical bullies and invincible in the cold logic of debate.

A Reluctant Hero

The illumination of these contradictory phases of a kindly, compassionate and complex character cover the period from Lincoln's early coaching in the rudiments of orderly thinking in the dim-lit cabin of Mentor Graham in New Salem to the day of his departure from Springfield to assume the Presidency of the United States in Washington, a reluctant hero to his townsmen, fearful of the future and still distrustful of his own ability to cope with the overpowering problems that confronted him.

There is tremendous drama, quiet humor and infinite pathos in this revelation of a Lincoln never before so minutely, so sympathetically or so authentically defined upon the stage of a theater. And interwoven with the purely personal aspects of an engrossing character study are those vivid flashes of American idealism that so comprehensively answer the pressing problems of the present day as to make the paly seem almost the perfect commentary upon the individual, political and social needs of our own times. It is, perhaps this very bridging of today's imponderable perplexities with those of almost a century ago that makes "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" so interesting, so compelling and so vital a drama.

Withal its many scenes and episodic form, the play is a closely knit and continuously moving recital of incident that contributes unfailingly to its major purpose and cumulative effect. It is homogeneous, coherent and direct. Its dominant figure, of course, always is the gaunt, gangling Lincoln. The unusually large number of other characters in the development of mighty events and one of the world's immortals are merely contributory to the evolution of the greatness that centered in a single man.

Massey Ideal Choice

Raymond Massey in the title role justifies all of the confidence that was reposed in him as the ideal selection for the part by Robert Sherwood and Maxwell Anderson, Sidney Howard, S. N. Behrman and Elmer Rice, the director of the play, who form the Playwrights' Producing Co. In appearance, Massey is startlingly like Lincoln and one suspects that the resemblance extends even to voice and manner of speech. His assumption of the chacarter is marked, furthermore, by a deftly wrought suggestion of slowly expanding grasp of both the joys and sorrows of living in a world of bitter conflict, tragic griefs and petty annoyances. His wooing of Ann Rutledge is eloquent in awkward tenderness, his vacillation in the face of Mary Todd's soaring ambition humble, and his later discomfiture at her biting recriminations not without violent resentment. In the debates with Douglas he is the shrewd and homely orator knowing his way to his hearers' minds and hearts. It is a variegated, finely rounded and convincing characterization Raymond Massey brings to Mr. Sherwood's sterling and timely play and the humility of its central character.

The long supporting cast abounds in players who lend efficient delineation and effective contrast to the impressive saping of the three acts. Muriel Kirkland is a vivacious and independent Mary Todd in the early periods of the action and an irritating harridan after 18 years of driving effort to realize her life's ambition to be the wife of a President. Much gentler and more ingenuous is Adele Longmire in the important but less conspicuus role of Ann Rutledge. Of Lincoln's legal and political associates, Arthur Griffin, as Judge Bowling Green; Lewis Martin, as Ninian Edwards; Calvin Thomas, as Joshua Speed, and Wendell K. Phillips, as William Herndon, contribute most to the fullness of the drama, with Albert Phillips lending a touch of additional strength in the role of Stephen A. Douglas. Frank Andrews is the Mentor Graham; Lillian Foster an appealingly sympathetic Nancy Green, and Howard Da Silva a blustering and ominous Jack Armstrong, chief hoodlum of the little town of New Salem. All the others are more than adequate.

Notables in Attendance

Last night's first performance on any stage was not without its moments of uncertainty and minor physical difficulties, but they were of such insignificance as to leave no important blemish upon the evening's unequivocal triumph. Jo Mielziner's settings and the costumes designed by Rose Bogdanoff were important adjuncts to the play's success.

Mr. Sherwood and his producing associates, Lee Shubert and many other New York theatrical notables and critics from other cities were among those who swelled last night's audience at the National. "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" deserves capacity houses through a long and successful life.

Row House Ban Is Proposed In Arlington

Advertising Authorized Hearing Set Nov. 14 Board Favors It, 3-2

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
Arlington County Bureau of The Post.
Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0609.

By a 3 to 2 vote the county board yesterday authorized advertising of proposed amendments to a zoning ordinance offered by Board Member Freeland F. Chew, which, he claims, will end row house development in Arlington County. November 14 was set by the board for a public hearing.

"No building, structure, dwelling or living unit of the type referred to and defined in paragraph 14 of section 2 of zoning ordinance and commonly known and designated as row houses shall hereafter be erected or structurally altered in any district provided for in the ordinance, whether such district be residential, business or industrial, and such type of construction wheresoever proposed to be located is for all intents and purposes hereafter specifically prohibited."

Proposed amendments also provide that all mention of row houses in present ordinances be stricken out.

The motion favoring publication of the proposed amendments was made by Member George M. Yeatman, who, at Saturday's meeting, voted in the negative, which necessitated the second vote yesterday.

Contract for installation of storm sewers in Ballston and Virginia Highlands sections of the county was awarded to David A. Calabrese, of Arlington. The accepted bid was $23,710.

Two contracts were also awarded to Jack Goddard & Son, of Arlington, for installation of trunk and lateral sewer lines. One is for $7,750 and calls for installation of trunk lines in Arlington View section and laterals in Arlington View, Twenty-third street and Hatfield. The second is for $10,700 and provides for trunk lines in Pimmet Run area with laterals along Military road.

William Smith Wins

Bingo Party Slated

Sponsoring the movement for a boy's club in the Clarendon area, the Clarendon Citizens Association will hold the first of a series of benefit bingo and card parties tomorrow night in the community house. Four problems considered of county-wide interest will be discussed at a meeting of the Arlington Ridge Citizens Association tonight in Hume School Hall at 8 o'clock.

Problems to be discussed will be proposal for county owned power plants, the fight against row house development, proposed staggering term of office of county board members and public health.

Dr. Ralph G. Beachley, county health officer, will speak.

Test Director Finally Makes A Feature

Now in Cutting-Room Turned Ameche Down Knows Better Now

Hollywood, Oct. 3 (U.P.).—Harold S. Bucquet is the only really modest movie director we have met.

He even admits without being pressed that he is the man who told Don Ameche he'd never be a movie actor—because of his face.

"That was only one of my mistakes," Bucquet reported today. "And I'm afraid I've made many of them. Of course, I've also learned a lot of things, too, so maybe it evens up."

Occasion for the interview was completion of the first feature picture Bucquet ever directed, after 15 years of struggling along, learning things at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

His picture, "Young Dr. Kildare," starring Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore and Lynne Carver, is in the cutting rooms.

"And the funny thing about it," Bucquet said, "was that I used to be Barrymore's assistant, when he was a director himself."

No Male Cinderella

Bucquet's story is the kind you read about in connection with, say, the steel business—concerning the young man who, by diligent application and intelligence, finally works his way to high places. It's no typical yarn about Hollywood, where apparently everyone but Bucquet has gone to sleep in a hall bedroom one night and awakened next morning, rich and famous, in a Brentwood mansion.

Bucquet ran away from home in England at 14, went to sea, mined silver in Canada, operated a dance hall in Oregon, ran a bowling alley in Washington, became an American citizen, fought in the World War as a second lieutenant, and eventually landed in Hollywood as a movie extra.

"And I'm not proud of my acting career, either," he said.

He soon got a job as assistant director in the silent days, working on pictures with such people as Lillian Gish, Greta Garbo, John Gilbert, and Victor Seastrom as stars. Joan Crawford was an extra in some of them. So was Myrna Loy.

"And a lot of other folks, too," Bucquet recalled. "I watched them all go up—and some of them came down quick—while I seemed to stay still. I was an assistant director and apparently that was what I was to be for the rest of my life."

Was Talent Discoverer

Eventually he got a different job. He wasn't promoted, he just was made test director. More years passed with Bucquet testing every aspirant for movie work who could pass the M. G. M. gates. He tested more than 1,500 men and women, had to turn most of them down, but occasionally found promise in the talents of such applicants as Luise Rainer, Robert Taylor, Allan Jones, Rosaline Russell and Irene Hervey.

"And it was during this period that I was called in to give a test to a young man who already had achieved fame on the radio," he said. "I soon discovered that I didn't have to coach him. He knew how to act, he had good diction and everything else, but when his face came on the screen I could see that it would never do.

"There was something odd about the mouth. So I told him I was sorry but there was no place for him in the movies. I advised him to go back to the radio.

"But he didn't. He went out to Fox and got a job. They changed his hairline a little and they had him grow a mustache and he wasn't the same Don Ameche that I had seen.

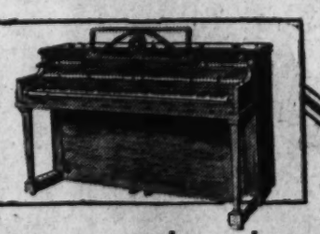

"So I sat down and wrote him a note in which I said I was glad I had made a mistake."

Bucquet said he hoped he never would have to direct another test.

Velvet Suits

Paris (U.P.).—To make the fall wardrobe really complete, a velvet suit is virtually a "must." They are not generously furred and femininely cut as in other years. Instead, they are as tailored as the woolen suits. Parisian stylists have designed them in deep purple and soft, taupe brown, as well as the more conservative, dressy black.

established that Godwin and Wilson, arrested on charges of burglary and shooting a policemen in a running gun battle with officers, were hiding in the stolen taxicab by day and probably would try to make a get-away tonight.

Meanwhile at Carthage, Godwin's young wife, freed after being charged with accompanying her husband on the series of crimes that landed him in jail, hid from Godwin while her father stood watch over the family homestead with a shotgun in belief Godwin and Wilson might come there.

"I just couldn't stand the thought of seeing a nice young man like Jimmy go to the gas chamber," Miss Kimel said when asked why she had released Godwin. "He's a changed man and he's got religion and he promised me he wouldn't get in any more trouble."

Godwin was being held in the jail here awaiting trial on charges of robbing several filling stations, stealing an automobile and first degree burglary in the baating of his aged grandfather who refused to tell him where he had hidden his money. Godwin and his wife were captured in South Carolina and brought here.

Although Godwin wrote to his wife, Mrs. Godwin, 18-year-old daughter of a respectable Carthage family, addressed her replies to Lula, who smuggled them to the young man, with whom she confessed she had become infatuated.

Informed of the "crime wave" attributed to the young desperado, Miss Kimel siad, "I can't believe it. He promised me faithfully he would stay out of trouble. He was such a nice young man and if they catch him he's sure to die." She said she was sorry now she had released him.

First crime attributed to the two after they left jail was kidnaping of Wilkes Swing, taxicab driver. The two youths drove the taxicab to nearby High Point and left Swing bound and gagged behind a warehouse. From then on, police said, the two made one desperate effort after another to get a new car and to dispose of the taxicab, which was prominently labeled "City Cab."

The youths were believed to have hidden the cab in some woods in the vicinity and a posse of hundreds of officers from this and nearby counties were unable to find it.

Believing the two might make a desperate dash for freedom tonight—they were armed with the jailer's gun Lula Belle had turned over with the keys and with a gun Godwin had stolen from his parents on threats of beating and tying them up—State highway patrolmen and the posses blocked all possible roads the two might take.

Jailer Kimel meanwhile was nearly prostrate with grief over action of his daughter and would see no one. He wrote in his letter of resignation to Sheriff Bowers:

"I am humiliated and grieved beyond control and have locked up my own daughter in jail in order that justice might find its course. Just why she should do such an act I am unable to understand. She has assisted both Mrs. Kimel and myself and worked hard at the jail all hours of the day and night and up to this time has been entirely loyal, obedient and trustworthy . . .

"Immediately upon the discovery of the infomation of the jail delivery I gave the alarm and my investigation finally brought out the truth. I want you to relieve me of my duties as deputy sheriff and jailer pending a full and complete investigation by your office, the county authorities and the courts."

one or three or five years ago.

From these things, it was said, the Nation can learn the same sort of lesson it learned last week from the crisis in Europe—that if labor and industry will stop calling names there can be domestic peace between business and Government, labor and business and various factions of labor.

As to the practical side of the current business situation, friends of Mr. Roosevelt asserted that merchandise stocks are down from last year.

Consumer demand, they added, is under that for this period a year ago, but not so far down as some reports would indicate.

Bright Spots Stressed

Bright spots in the economic picture were said to be a more-than-seasonal increase in employment and the Government's pump-priming program, which will not reach its top effectiveness until next spring.

All approved PWA projects will be in full swing next spring, it was asserted, along with most developments sponsored by the Federal Housing Authority.

Thus, it was said, prospects are that the Nation can look forward to pretty good business for the rest of this year if prices are kept at proper levels.

As to prices, Mr. Roosevelt was represented as trying to hold to a policy of keeping quotations on certain commodities from going too high and trying to bolster prices on other commodities.

Prices which need lifting, it was said, include those of cotton and wheat, which were said not to meet the cost of production and allow the farmer a profit.

Knitted Evening Gowns Set New Paris Fashion

Paris (U.P.).—Knitting needles are turning out such fashionable—and fanciful—garments these days that one wonders where to draw the dividing line between handknits, tweed materials and laces.

Anny Blatt's new knit evening gowns for the coming season are exemplary of this swing to haute couture, which master knitters have almost accomplished. Newest and most astounding is the combining of fleecy knitting with mousseline for evening wear. It's one of those ideas which needs seeing to believe.

If, say a chartreuse mousseline evening dress happens to get cigarette holes burned in its lower half, there's no need to worry. Knit the lower half of the skirt of chartreuse wool and silk yarn in a lace pattern; then poin it to the upper skirt half with a jagged joining line. Insert a bodice yoke of the same lacey knit.

Jackets Are Longer Skirts Shorter

Paris (AP).—New suits have three-quarter jackets flaring sharply from a fitted waist, the flare accentuated by a border of lynx or fox. These models call for straighter skirts. All day skirts are short, some just covering knees, but authorities differ and lengths vary. Evening skirts usually reach the ground, a few are ankle length, a few trained.

Swank coat and suiting fabrics take in duvetines, velvets, broadcloth, and fine soft wools smooth or hairy. For sports and travel are tweeds, chevrons and diagonals, plains and plaids, stripes and checks. Afternoon dresses gain glamor in new damask crepes, heavy cloques, satins and velvets.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Engaged Young Couple Lacks Opportunity for Intimate Conversation; Where to Find It?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a young lady for two years. She is 23 and I am 25. We are engaged to be married—having confessed our love for each other after four months of courtship—and are trying, out of our rather meager incomes, to save enough cash to make a substantial down payment on a home. We feel we should postpone marriage until we are able to do this. Her family consists of father, mother and a brother. I have a widowed mother.

This is our problem: Like all young couples in love, we have many things to discuss in confidence, but little opportunity for doing so. My fiancee objects to our going off alone in my car, mostly because she is afraid of the effect on our reputation. Both of us are very much interested in church work, take an active part in church work and have lots of friends in this field.

We have discussed this problem many times (as we have always been frank with each other and have solved many other difficulties by talking them over); I have agreed with her that it might be detrimental to our reputations to be seen parked in some out-of-the-way place; but we feel an increasing need to get away to ourselves and discuss our plans for the future. If we go to her home, her family always sits up until quite late and it is always time for me to go home when they finally retire. There is no opportunity for intimate conversation.

Of course, you know as well as I do the sort of thing that goes on in parked cars, and that the only way to avoid either temptation or suspicion is to turn thumbs-down on the practice. But how else are we to get a few minutes alone together? I will appreciate anything you may have to say that might help us solve the problem. Sincerely yours,

H. G. K.

The Ideal Sanctuary

DEAR H. G. K.: If your ardent desire to be left alone together is motivated solely by a desire to discuss future plans in confidence, the solution of your problem is amazingly simple. The answer is—go for a long, long walk, once or twice a week. Since time and love began, the world has offered no more potentially constructive, companionable or pleasurable diversion to artless lovers than an unchaperoned walk in spring or autumn weather. Not even the lewdest mind can find justification or support for casting the finger of scorn or suspicion on so innocent and open an enterprise, while the benefits to the strolling twain are manifold and immeasurable.

On the physical side, you have the benefit to health of the most highly recommended of all out-door exercises—a guaranteed tonic so far as lungs and general circulation are concerned. On the mental and spiritual sides, you have incomparable opportunity for negotiating an intimate, unembarrassed exchange of ideas and opinions and arriving at a crystal-clear understanding of each others' personalities; and on the emotional side, you have a safety valve in the exertion, discipline and circumstances attendant upon this particular exercise that should keep the headiest mutual ardor under seemly control.

The long, leisurely, confidential strolls of their courting days should be among the happiest memories of all married couples. It is a matter for regret that our so-called machine-age civilization should be so largely divorcing mankind from the use of its legs, so that the city dweller in particular no longer knows the feel of the earth beneath his feet. There is something at once senseless and pathetic in the spectacle of able bodied youth's relying upon wheels as its supposed only means of locomotion, and acting on the sterile and stereotyped assumption that a parked automobile is the only alternative to oppressive chaperonage. M. H.

Dulled-Glazed Pottery Matches Wifey's Gown

Match your pet hostess gown to your breakfast service. That's a new note for fall, recently introduced in Chicago, in pastel pottery. Opaline green, powder blue, pastel canary, petal pink, satin turquoise and peach are new shades in the pottery. Particularly effective is the dull glaze used to replace the highly glazed blatant reds, brilliant oranges, and vivid greens of last year's coffee cups and sugar and creamer.

Effective combinations of pink, blue and yellow are suggested for various pieces in the service.

Classic Cut in Camel's Hair

If only one coat were to be included in a model, well-balanced wardrobe, a comfortable majority of classicists would insist on a camel's hair balmacaan. It is a coat at once ageless in its universal appeal and pleasingly distinctive in this season of bejeweled elegance. Some converts to this combine of beaver or nutria with camel's hair, reorder top coats, such as the one illustrated, every three or four years, although if fine quality wool is purchased, it cannot be outworn or outdated. Travel-wise voyagers are its greatest addicts, for neutral coloring makes it indispensable for all-around wear; its softness makes it light enough to carry from port to port, and yet warm enough for shipboard or shore leave. Its raglan looseness is ideal for women of varying dimensions, and its cost is reasonable

Bowling Helps Women Melt Waistlines

Uses Skill, Not Brawn Flexes All Muscles Keeps Body in Trim

By Ida Jean Kain.

When you put away your golf clubs for the long winter, take up bowling. Since it calls for rhythm and timing instead of brawn, there's a game at which you are on an equal footing with your husband. You even have a chance to trounce him.

Ruth Creagh, an authority on women's sports, tells us that history was made when Mrs. Floretta McCutchson, of Pueblo, Colo., a matronly looking woman unknown outside her home town, defeated Jimmy Smith, world famous bowler on an exhibition tour of the country.

That, apparently, was the beginning of women's interest in bowling and it is now in the class with big-time recreation. According to Miss Creagh, there are more than 15,000 members of the Women's International Bowling Congress and there is scarcely a town without its club or team of women bowlers.

The Rage in Hollywood

In Hollywood, bowling is in full swing and many of the studios have alleys on the lots. Perhaps the reason is that the game takes inches off the waistline and helps to keep the stars svelte for the camera, but it is also a means of perfect relaxation from the steady grind.

In case you have the idea that bowling exercises only the arms, just 20 per cent of the work is done with these muscles. The game brings all your muscles into play. The technique is to bend forward at the waist, balancing the weight of the ball with the left hand. Move forward in a quick walk and, as you do so, carry the ball back and up in the right hand. As you slide to a stop the ball is brought forward with the momentum of the entire body behind it.

Done correctly, bowling is much better exercise than when the ball is bounced down the alley with the arm muscles. And here's a tip for your scoring—until you are pretty good at the game, authorities advise sticking to the light weight balls. And they tell us always to aim for the No: 5 pin.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

OF ALL the big institutions in this biggest of all possible countries, none—not even a grand hotel—is more fascinating than a huge department store. It is as intricate as a watch, with just as many wheels within wheels, and the average woman who goes in to peer at the notion counter hasn't the faintest idea of many of the things which go on behind the scenes.

ALICE HUGHES.

I was a store gal myself, long before I got into the reporting business. In fact, my first job out of journalism school was writing ad copy for a small specialty shop on Fifth avenue, and I wound up that phase of my "career" as head fashion copy writer for one of the largest and most famous of all emporia. It was the inside of store business, and I knew it started me in this trade. I told so many little store stories at parties that I was finally impelled to see if I could sell them—and at last I did, in a newspaper column.

One of the girls the casual shopper knows nothing about is the "comparison" girl. It is her daily business to roam the enchanted aisles of all competing shops, to check the quality of the merchandise and its prices, and report to her own boss. In this way prices are met and merit maintained, and when a "price war" breaks out, the comparison shopper is busier than our cat Petunia. In the old days the comparison force used to try to hide its identity—now most of them are known to competitors, and get as good, or better, service than the mere customer.

One of the leaders in this field in our town in Anna Lutzi, who for ten years has headed a big comparison department with eight girls on her staff. "We shop all competing stores, and they shop with us—we watch everything from pins to complete furniture sets. The girl who shops the liquor departments has the busiest time, because that's where price wars break out," says Anna. Funny world, the store. That little woman next you at the counter may be shopping for the place next door!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Shopping the shows to check on the current hair-do's is interesting. In "I Married An Angel," which opened last spring, I saw only five chorus girls with the hair swished up. In "You Never Know," newly opened, I counted nine. By November 1, perhaps, a chorus cutie might not even dare ask for a job if her hair concealed her neck.

A leading personality in town is Mrs. Hortense Odlum, head of a brilliant Fifth Avenue store. I've never seen her without a bunch of fresh flowers, usually carried in her hand. A dainty woman, with beautiful feet, she encases them in specially made shoes from Paris—though the finest this country affords are right in her own store. She also has a penchant for fine hankies, and those she carries are dainty, cobwebby affairs. Is it any wonder that the shoe and kerchief departments are about the strongest in her own store, feeling as she does about those things?

It is now reported here that Tallulah Bankhead will not bring Zoe Akins' show, "I Am Different," into this town, owing to skirmishes with the author. In fact, Turbulent Talloo is said to have another opus, called "Happily Ever After" picked out for Broadway.

Two Hollywood girls, Helen Twelvetrees and Eleanore Whitney, are reported to be headed east for new shows.

A nice married couple will be separated this winter. Guy Robertson, the blond operetta singer, will play the Wallace Ford part in "Of Mice and Men" on tour—and his cute wife, Audrey Christie, will stay right on charming the customers in "I Married An Angel."

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, still an eyeful for all the years and weddings, was noted at the Novarro the other day in a wool suit of LeLong's Persian Red with gray kidskin gloves, topping it all with a Persian red toque. Peg looked great. Time she was marrying some nice American fellow and settling down with her hatful of emeralds.

Toys are going in strongly for dummies this season—naturally, since the triumphs of Master McCarthey on screen and air. I've just seen a new one called Clippo, which can dance and do all sorts of tricks by yanking a string. Virginia Austin designed him. She is said to have created the beautiful, expressive face of McCarthy.

Tall Tales

The time he ran away from home because his rich and illustrious family back East, back West, back in Europe—or back somewhere—tried to make him conform to their stuffy conventional ways.

The time he got kicked out of Yale or Harvard or Oxford or some place for turning the hose on the mathematics prof.

The time he won $20,000 on the races at Pimlico—or Saratoga—on a tip from either a mysterious stranger or a Negro stableboy whose great-grandfather belonged to his family.

The time he cleaned up at Monte Carlo.

The time he had to flee to Indo-China to escape the native Hawaiian princess who had taken a shine to him.

The time he staged the 10-day party at Tia Juana and didn't remember anything about it until he waked up in San Diego.

The time he routed a gang of toughs in the Bowery . . . the time he fought his way out of an opium den in San Francisco . . . the time he knocked half a dozen men cold in the London Lime House . . . the time he beat up a bunch of drunken sailors in Shanghai . . . the time he shot his way out of a dive in Juarez . . . the time he got away from a bunch of Al Capone gangsters in Chicago who thought he was a G-man . . . the time he escaped from a firing squad in Moscow.

The time he aided the beautiful—but bankrupt—girl he met on a bus just outside of Utica, N. Y., and how she turned out to be a Russian countess with an ikon.

The time he ransomed a native slave girl off the auction block in India so she could escape a maharajah's harem.

The time he started a free-for-all fight in the New York subway because he knocked down a big husky who had pushed a little mother with a baby.

The time he officiated as midwife for a rancher's wife in Northern Montana when a blizzard held up the doctor.

The time he saved a desperate girl (from a good Presbyterian family) from taking her first false step, by buying her an oyster stew and getting her a job as a waitress.

The time he met the gangster's moll who had been reared in a convent and who read Proust and Lord Dunsany between bank robberies.

The time he was at Sarajevo when Archduke Ferdinand was shot; the time he was at Versailles when the peace treaty was put over; the time he was in Paris when Lindbergh landed; the time he was in Berlin when Hitler "putsched;" the time he was in Moscow when Stalin purged; the time he was in London when Edward abdicated; the time he was in Nanking when the Japanese advanced; the time he was in Madrid when Franco bombed; the time he will have been in Moscow when the Big Four confabbed.

How to Paint Furniture

DO YOU have a pet dream about your room? Perhaps you'd like to fix it up in studio style—but budget trouble stops you!

Suppose you're doing over the bookcase first. The doors and legs you easily take off—then wash the case with ammonia and water. If the finish is glossy, use ¼ pound sal soda in one gallon water. Dry it 48 hours, remove oil, grease or wax with turpentine or gasoline.

Smooth rough spots with sandpaper. If the piece has a gummy varnish, apply paint or varnish remover, scrape off with a case or putty knife. Work with the grain. Give final cleaning with benzine or turpentine.

If you're going to paint your bookshelves—and they'll look charming in a cream or a gay color to match your draperies—use an enamel, sandpaper lightly between coats.

You may prefer to do a refinishing job on the buffet—particularly if the wood has an attractive grain. Take off the mirror, scrolls and legs, prepare as you did the bookshelves, but after the final cleaning, apply stain.

If you want a light tone, spread stain lightly, wipe off quickly. For a darker tone, let the stain dry in.

Follow with one or two coats of shellac, a good waxing—and what was once an outmoded buffet will be a beautiful chest of drawers.

Refinishing, antiquing, decorating.

Send 15c for our booklet, How to Paint and Refinish Furniture, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Fashion Decrees Coats of Many Colors for Fall

Paris (U.P.).—Rich, gay and light colors, shown to such surprising quantity in the new collections, appear for the first time in many years as accepted tones for fall and winter cloth coats—coats with or without fur trimming.

For the full length cloth coat, deep plum and violet shades bid to outdo all other colors. Slit coats, however, lean either toward smoky blues or rust shades. Both types are ornately trimmed with arabesques or floral cutouts of broadtail or lamb; their satin linings are often black. And when they are not black they tend to be of a brilliant contrasting color.

The winter's simple long coat, an absolute necessity in anyone's wardrobe, has a certain width of back which involves wide shoulders; and a slight back fullness above the waist which eases the fit. This latter may be accomplished by deft fitting which introduces a very narrow center gore tightening the waist and flinging width into an expertly done skirt.

ERNEST LINDLEY

Author of many books on the New Deal, Mr. Lindley is recognized as a well-informed and sympathetic observer of the Administration's program and point of view. An admirer of President Roosevelt's aims and policies, he is also an objective reporter with unusual insight and broad experience.

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR
WASHINGTON

My congratulations to you upon obtaining the services of Ernest K. Lindley as a political commentator. I have observed Mr. Lindley's writings with interest for a considerable period and, while I frequently disagree with his opinions, he is well qualified to interpret intelligently the current political and economic scene, and I will enjoy reading his "slant" on national developments.

Harold L. Ickes
Secretary of the Interior.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
WASHINGTON

I should like to express my personal pleasure in the announcement that you have brought to your staff as a commentator on public affairs Mr. Ernest K. Lindley. It is not that I regard Mr. Lindley as a pro-Administration spokesman, because I think his writings indicate that he recognizes no such fixed affiliation. It is rather because Mr. Lindley is an exceptionally able, impartial and at the same time truly penetrating newspaper man. A newspaper that serves such men as a vehicle of expression thereby will be distinctly serving the public.

H A Wallace
Secretary

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS
WASHINGTON

It was with a great deal of pleasure that I read the announcement in the Washington Post that you are to publish a column by Ernest Lindley.

I personally do not know of anyone who is more fit by temperament and experience to conduct a column on the economic and political events in Washington. My knowledge of Mr. Lindley's work both as an independent author, a representative of the New York Herald-Tribune, and a representative of Newsweek convinces me that there are few people in American journalism today who are as equal in their ability to grasp the significance of current events in the capitol as he.

Both you and the Washington Post are to be congratulated. I know that the venture is going to be most successful.

WASHINGTON

I am delighted to learn that you have arranged with Ernest Lindley to write a column for your paper. I have always been an admirer of Lindley and often wondered why he didn't enter the ranks of the columnists because he certainly possesses the background and the intimate knowledge of public affairs which puts him in the front rank.

My heartiest congratulations to both you and him.

A J Altmeyer

Duchess of Atholl Twice Flashes A Personality on Society Here

Speakers at Luncheon at Press Club Also Honored by de Los Rios at Dinner Hearers Forget Her Title, Not Her Thought

By Hope Ridings Miller,

A SMALL WOMAN with graying hair, soft hazel eyes and a rich voice held the spotlight at two events accenting yesterday's calendar. She is the Duchess of Atholl, widely known writer, lecturer and member of the British Parliament, who speaks with authority on the current European conflict between fascism and democracy.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Last evening, Her Grace was guest of honor at a dinner given by the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios. Several hours earlier, she talked before a couple of hundred members and guests of the Women's National Press Club at a luncheon at the Wilalrd Hotel. In both gatherings she explained her position in regard to Czechoslovakia and Spain, and pointed out that the issues now at stake in one were similar to those in the other. Also, on each occasion she answered a barrage of questions about her trip to Spain last year when she sponsored a blockade-running venture to take food and medicine to beleaguered Bilbao.

At both the luncheon and the dinner there were guests, naturally, who were happy to come because a duchess was being honored; but after being in her presence for only a brief time it was easy to forget she was a titled woman and a member of Parliament, for her illuminating remarks on what is happening, and may happen, in Europe, removed the personal equation.

Like many duchesses, Her Grace is not fashion conscious. But what she had to say yesterday at noon was so much more important than the style of her dark straw hat or the cut of her tailored black coat that when her speech was finished you had scarcely noticed what she wore.

So it was last night. Her conservative evening ogwn, set off with ropes of pearls, attracted little attention, once she had begun to talk . . . to answer questions . . . to point out the importance of defeating fascism in Spain . . . to emphasize the fact that peace cannot be assured in Europe until it is clear which type of government is to predominate.

SENORA DE LOS RIOS, who with the Ambassador, received the guests in the drawing room, was gowned in black lace, fashioned in tiers and finished off with a scarf that gracefully draped her shoulders. The long dining room table was decorated with a centerpiece of roses and dahlias—one of the loveliest I have ever seen.

Guests at the dinner included the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun; Victor Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy; Jacques Truello, Counselor of the French Embassy; Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the Division of European Affairs, Department of State, and Mrs. Moffat; Ben Mark Cherrington, chief of the newly formed division of cultural relations, Department of State, and Mrs. Cherrington; Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Eugene Meyer, Dean and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, the new Minister-Counselor of the Spanish Embassy, Dr. Pedro Lecuona and Senora de Lecuona; Senorita Isabel Garcia Lorca, who is visiting at the Embassy, and Adolfo Salazar, new cultural attache of the Embassy.

PRESS WOMEN, Government officials, representatives of the Diplomatic Corps and a number of residential Washingtonians were in the crowd that heard the Duchess of Atholl speak at the luncheon. Basing her observations on her own experiences in Spain last year, Her Grace pointed out the need for food and munitions among the loyalist troops at the conclusion of her remarks outlining the issues at stake in the conflict.

After her speech she answered a number of questions both on the situation in Spain and in central Europe, but noticeably refrained from commenting adversely on the position the Prime Minister recently has taken. Among those who heard her were Senora de los Rios, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife if the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Benton McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, who recently returned from a trip to Europe; Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol; Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times; Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, and many others.

The Duchess arrived in Washington Monday evening from Baltimore, where she made a brief visit after spending several days in New York. She will return to New York today and later will go to the Middle West to fill several lecture engagements.

Bedtime Stories

A Greater Marvel

More frequently than often
Are common things with wonder thought
—Old Mother Nature.

"I think it is marvelous how Homing Pigeons can find their way home from such long distances," declared Sue. "I don't believe any other birds can do anything as wonderful as that."

The Old Naturalist's face lighted with the slow smile that Tommy, Sue and Sammy had come to know so well, and that meant that he was pleasantly amused by something one of them had said. "It is marvelous," he agreed. "I don't know of anything more so than this instinct for direction, and the Pigeons have it to an amazing degree. But, my dear, don't forget that this instinct for finding the way back home has been developed through careful training, while some of our so-called wild feathered friends do without any training whatever, even more wonderful things."

"What for instance?" asked Sammy.

Just then there was a rather harsh cry from overhead, and all looked up to see a bird that Sammy declared looked like a giant Swallow with a hole in each wing darting about. What Sammy thought looked like a hole in each long narrow wing was a white spot.

The Old Naturalist chuckled. "The very bird I had in mind," said he. "Who is it, Tommy?"

"Boomer the Nighthawk," came the prompt reply for Tommy is Farmer Brown's boy, and he knows the birds.

Sue had a question at once. "That's a funny name for a bird no bigger than that," said she. "Why do you call him Boomer? That noise he makes isn't anything like a boom."

"If you were around here when Mr. Nighthawk does his courting in the spring you wouldn't ask why we call him Boomer. He booms plenty then. I guess he does it to show off. He flies way up high and then comes down head first like a shot with his wings half closed. Just before he reaches the earth he spreads his wings and turns upward and right then there is a regular boom. I suppose it is made somehow by the air against those spread wings," explained Tommy.

The Old Naturalist nodded. "That sudden checking of the plunge downward makes the stiff primaries of the wings vibrate and this makes the sound. You know the primaries are the long, stiff outer flying feathers of the wings," said he. "Of course, you know the bird isn't a Hawk at all. It isn't even related to the family."

"Then what is it called a Nighthawk for? That seems to me silly," said Sammy.

"Many things sound silly or foolish when we do not know the reason for them," replied the Old Naturalist. "You know that Hawks often pursue their prey in the air. It is so with the Nighthawk. It lives on flying insects and chases them and catches them in the air after the manner of a true Hawk. And because it does much of its hunting in the early evening, often well into the night, it is called Nighthawk. It is a very wonderful bird and what it does in migration is a greater marvel than the return home of a Pigeon even from a thousand miles away. Do you know where Boomer spends the winter?"

"South America," ventured Tommy as a guess.

"Not only South America but southern South America, way down in Argentina," was the prompt reply. And it often returns to the very place where it nested the year before, and this after a journey of thousands of miles."

"How do you know the birds that return are the same ones?" demanded Sammy bluntly. His voice sounded a little skeptical.

"By banding," was the reply. "I know of one Nighthawk who laid her eggs on a flat graveled roof and was banded there. For four successive years she returned to that roof and nested there. Each year she was picked up and the number on the band was checked to make sure that this was the same bird. Think of flying to a strange land several thousands of miles away, spending the winter there, and returning to the very place from which the journey started. So I think that the migration of some of our common birds is a greater marvel than the homing instinct of Pigeons."

"So do I," declared Sue. "I don't see how they do it."

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 4.—Industrial securities fell to lower levels in the stock market today, along with rubber, rayon and tobacco shares. Oil and mining issues were easier and domestic rails sold fractionally down. Czechoslovakia bonds moved sharply higher following reports of the new loans, but reacted partly later in the session. Other foreign liens were firmer while transatlantic and British gilt-edged issues moved irregularly.

Paris, Oct. 4.—The bourse closed with trading active today although price movements were mixed. Rantes were as much as 3 francs higher at the finish. Bank of France gained more than 100 francs, while Suez Canal lost 600. Royal Dutch was slightly down.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures weakened today on the bearish official Argentine crop report and increased French and Danubian shippers' offers. Final prices were ¼d to 1¾d net lower. Scattered buying in cotton futures was attracted by steadiness of overseas markets and firmness of the dollar in foreign exchange. Closing prices were 1 to 4 points up.

All Policemen To Be Trained For Traffic

Special Couses Planned 'Cash Car' Proposed Safety Speakers Selected

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A new series of traffic training courses for members of the Metropolitan Police Department will be inaugurated within the next week of ten days, Maj. Ernest W. Brown announced yesterday.

Every member of the force, said Maj. Brown, will receive special instruction in traffic control and accident investigation work.

Seven members of the department recently graduated from the University of Maryland's traffic officers' training school will act as instructors.

"Crash Car" Proposed

"It is essential," said Maj. Brown, "that all policemen have an adequate knowledge of traffic control work if we are to combat successfully the growing accident problem. I want all my men to become traffic conscious."

Daily sessions, to be held in the police school at headquarters, will cover all phases of the question from scientific investigation to the fundamentals of directing traffic at street corners, Maj. Brown declared.

With a properly trained staff, Maj. Brown indicated he planned eventually to expand the department's accident prevention program by forming special traffic squads, equipped with the latest in scientific highway safety weapons.

He suggested a so-called "crash car"—to be used in accident investigations and emergency first aid in cases of personal injuries—would be added to the traffic force if funds are made available.

Safety Institute Slated

Meanwhile, plans for The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce traffic safety institute—scheduled to open October 28—advanced yesterday with selection of a tentative list of speakers.

Opening sessions of the 10-week series will feature Maj. Brown, Thomas H. MacDonald, director of the Bureau of Public Roads; Frank L. Ahern, chief of the safety division, National Park Service, and George Kenepp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club.

Maj. Brown announced also that instructors for the special officers' training course would include Capt. Oscar Letterman, Lieut. Floyd Truscott, Lieut. L. R. Beall, Sergt. H. R. Gore, Sergt. B. C. Beach, Lieut. Clarence Talley and Pvt. L. A. Hartnett.

Forget Textbooks For Radio, Press, Teachers Urged

Forget textbooks when history is in the making and permit students to sit in on world happenings by way of the radio and newspapers, Dr. John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education, yesterday advised American teachers.

"Bring the world crisis into the classroom," he advised. "It is worth any trouble it takes to rearrange and organize the high school or college schedule these days to enable the students to hear at first hand the most important pronouncements being made by history-making leaders."

Especially can teachers of psychology, sociology, civics, and history find an abundance of material coming to them over the air and in the press, the commissioner declared.

"There's nothing in the textbooks to compare with it," he said, asserting that broadcasts and newspaper accounts ought to be "homework" for students these days and much class time given to a careful discussion of the meaning of it all.

Night Club Owner Wins Noise Case

Bernard Goldstein, operator of the Melody Club at Thomas Circle, was released on personal bond in Police Court yesterday, after neighbors complained that his band created a disturbance.

Judge John P. McMahon took Goldstein's bond when the latter explained that the club had moved inside from the roof garden and the music would not disturb the neighbors. The defendant promised that next summer the offense would not be repeated.

"The people in that neighborhood apparently don't want to indulge in night club life," Judge McMahon commented.

Eye, Ear, Nose, Throat Specialists To Convene Here

More than 2,000 specialists in the treatment of eye, ear, nose and throat diseases will gather here next week for the annual convention of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otlaryngology.

Sessions will be held at the Mayflower Hotel beginning Sunday. Delegates will attend from throughout the country, Canada and the various United States possessions.

Guests of honor at a reception to Harry S. Gradle, of Chicago, president, will include Surgeon General of the Army and Mrs. Charles R. Reynolds, Surgeon General of the Navy and Mrs. Perceval S. Rossiter and Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service and Mrs. Thomas Parran.

Boy Scouts Boost Request to Chest

The District Boy Scouts Monday asked the Community Chest budget committee for $29,249 during the coming fiscal year, an increase of $5,753 over 1938.

Scout officials explained their income from the chest includes salaries of leaders. Included in their request were salary increases to the scout executive and two assistants, additional salaries for workers in the administrative branch, new equipment, replacements and insurance.

The Boys Club of Washington asked $34,249 for 1939, an increase of $4,422. Camp Reeder, operated by the clubs, has its own budget, it was explained. An estimate of $4,435 was made of its needs next year.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

In a weak moment, warmed by San Francisco hospitality and California wine, I promised to write something about the Golden Gate exposition . . . Well, maybe I owe it as a duty to you 3,000,000 subscribers and your 6,000,000 tots to know that they promise to give away $20,000,000 worth of free samples and souvenirs—some of them edible.

George Creel . . . sink one

No matter whether Hitler fights his postponed war next year, the battle of 1939 will be between New York and Frisco (as we yokels affectionately call it); between Mayors La Guardia and Rossi, the two Italian burgomeister; between the exquisite Grover Whalen and the unpredictable George Creel, who isn't the head of the Frisco fair, but you'd never know it to hear him talk. (He is the Federal commissioner, and the United States Government has $8,450,000 in the California fair.)

Well, I doubt that the New York Fair will give away $20,000,000 worth of free samples.

They'll probably sell their free samples, as at the Chicago fair . . .

And I think the Frisco fair will be the more moral of the two; out West they'll require each dancer to wear a sarong.

"—the battle of '39"

But to Frisco, a Peruvian is riding from Lima on a llama . . .

A New Yorker is bouncing from Poughkeepsie on a pogo-stick . . .

A Nevadian is truckin' from Truckee . . .

From a spiritualist medium, Director Harris Connick has an offer to have the lights turned on at Treasure Island nightly by the ghost of Thomas Alva Edison . . .

". . . Edison's ghost at the switch"

And to show you how Californians do things: They've hired the girl who interior-decorated Grover Whalen's pent-house apartment to decorate the whole Frisco fair . . .

(They say she'll use 140 tons of gold in her decorative scheme, but I think they mean gold paint.)

They've even invented a new color called golden emerald. I imagine it's the shade of immature California oranges . . .

On the "Gay way" there will be authentic Javanese dancing girls, just a detail in the Forty Acres of Fun . . . That's the west forty, no doubt . . .

And there's to be a $1,200,000 Chinese village, and a seven-acre replica of the Barbary Coast—"pruned of its real wickedness," I am assured, and you can assure Aunt Emma. (Was it really so wicked, as you look back?)

"—the Javanese are genuine"

Well, San Francisco always goes to my head, Gayway or no Gayway . . .

I could enjoy an afternoon on Treasure Island even if the Javanese dancing girls were palpable fakes from Brooklyn . . .

Even if there weren't any exposition, San Francisco is worth the trip for ten or twenty million visitors any year; not just in 1939.

So I won't bother to enumerate the more serious and more frivolous of the ingenious and intricate enchantments.

I'll promise to come to the Frisco Fair if Mayor Rossi will give me a list of the really good California wines—the ones the insiders drink.

Both Parties To Aim First At Calvert

Democrats Bare Plans Will Start Saturday At Prince Frederick North Beach Is Next

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 4.—Southern Maryland will be the first big battleground of the State's general election campaign, with both Democrats and Republicans opening their fight in Calvert County this week.

Gov. Harry W. Nice and his Republican cavalcade will descend on the county Thursday, with Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor and his Democratic entourage starting off on Saturday.

To Visit Every County

Both gubernatorial candidates will be accompanied by the other nominees for State offices on their tickets, and both expect to continue tours through every county in the State until the end of this month. The final week of the campaign, until election day, November 8, will be spent in Baltimore.

Gov. Nice's plans were announced late last week. Plans for the Democratic tour were announced from the O'Conor headquarters today.

Accompanying O'Conor will be Senator Millard E. Tydings, William C. Walsh, nominee for attorney general; J. Millard Tawes, nominee for comptroller, and James A. Young, nominee to succeed himself as clerk of the court of appeals.

Democratic Itinerary

Democratic speech-making begins at Prince Frederick Saturday afternoon, moving on to North Beach that night. Next Monday and Tuesday, O'Conor forces spread into other parts of southern Maryland including Charles, St. Marys, Anne Arundel and Prince Georges counties, tracing and retracing paths of the Republican candidates.

The rest of the week will be devoted to central Maryland, including Harford, Howard and Carroll counties, with the campaign shifting into western Maryland the following week.

Gov. Nice announced one change in his itinerary today. His Charles County visit, slated originally for October 8, will be posponed until November 2, when he will make a noon-day address at La Plata.

Maryland Voters Advised How

Procedure of making application for registration and ballots in the November election was explained yesterday by the technical staff at Republican headquarters, 1413 H street northwest, for absentee voters from Maryland living in Washington.

The Maryland law requires that a year elapse between the date a person files a declaration of intent to become a resident with the clerk of the circuit court of his county, or with the registrars when in session, and the date on which he becomes eligible to vote.

Three exceptions include women who were residents August 26, 1921, and have resided continuously in the State since that time; persons who became of age within the State before date of election and who have remained residents continuously since then. Any voter falling under one of these classifications may register October 11.

5,358 Md. Bonds Must Be Signed By Roads Board

Baltimore, Oct. 4 (AP).—Twenty solid hours of writing their own names confronted five high Maryland officials today. Members of the State roads commission—Chairman Commissioner Elmer Jarboe and Commissioner Frank F. Luthardt—the State comptroller, William S. Gordy, jr., and the State treasurer, Hooper S. Miles, will be the "writer's cramp" victims.

Each must sign every one of the 5,358 bonds making up the roads commission's $5,358,000 refunding bond issue, sold last Friday. Each bond is worth $1,000—if one of the five officials makes a mistake, the spoiled bond must be reprinted.

Clash Between Game Warden And Deputy Is Declared 'Draw'

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 4.—A newly appointed deputy game warden and a veteran deputy sheriff retold today their fight over a bag of squirrels in which weapons used included a shotgun, blackjack and knife.

Deputy Warden George W. Stone, 32, of near Yellow Springs, was charged with assault and battery and larceny of $34 by Deputy Sheriff Ira T. Sears, 61, of near Park Mills, who was charged with assault and battery, and resisting arrest.

The fight, Stone testified, began when he found Sears with seven squirrels, one more than the legal limit, on Saturday.

For more than two hours today witnesses and participants relived the fight. Before his desk Police Magistrate Walter E. Sinn had seven dead squirrels which had been introduced as evidence. The room was warm, the squirrels were ripe and Judge Sinn finally decided the "evidence was too conflicting" to hold either on the charges preferred by the other. Both defendants were dismissed.

Stone testified he was appointed deputy warden last September 17. With two companions he went hunting for squirrels. They heard several shots, he said, and finally came upon Sears. They exchanged greetings and Sears showed him six squirrels. Just then another squirrel fell from Sears' coat, said the game warden. Sears put it back into his coat and refused to produce it.

Stone said the deputy sheriff then hit him in the face. They fought and Sears' gun was discharged, Stone said, and finally the deputy sheriff "pulled a knife." The deputy game warden said he "pulled a blackjack" to defend himself and struck the deputy sheriff on the head.

Sears' testimony differed. The deputy sheriff said Stone threw the blackjack at him and that the gun was discharged accidentally after Stone grabbed it. He said when the blackjack knocked him down, the deputy game warden took the money from his pocket.

Busy Cupid Sets Record At Elkton

2,234 Wed in Month Most in 25 Years Referendum Looms 48-Hour Law Asked

By the Associated Press.

Elkton Md., Oct. 4.—Marrying parsons at this Gretna Green had their most profitable month during September in 25 years.

Court records showed today 2,234 licenses were issued at $2 each, the highest number since the town became the mecca of romance-stricken couples. The number shattered the previous record, set in August when 1,874 licenses were issued, chiefly to residents of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, the District of Columbia, and New York, particularly in those States where marriage laws have been tightened.

The marital profit making by the four or five ordained ministers who depend on marriage fees for a livelihood was earned, however, under the shadow of a referendum which may place them among the unemployed.

The citizens committee on marriage legislation met today in Baltimore and decided to issue circulars urging voters in the November 8 general election to vote for the State legislation which requires 48 hours notice of intent to wed. If approved by voters, the law will become effective in 30 days.

The committee is composed of ministers, social workers, attorneys and prominent Maryland residents who have pressed for the passage of the legislation for several years.

Committes to back the legislation are to be formed in Cumoerland, Frederick, Hagerstown and other sections of the State.

The law was passed in 1937 without much opposition but a referendum petition containing the legally required amount of signatures was filed with the secretary of State, making it inoperative until passed on in the next general election.

Last month the various offices of the service made the following placements in private industry:

Annapolis, 101; Towson, 93; Cambridge, 62; Chestertown, 22; Cumberland, 165; Oakland, 32; Frederick, 113; Rockville, 19; Westminster, 7; Hagerstown, 166; Hyattsville, 55; Salisbury, 84.

Staunton River Span Advocated

Richmond, Va., Oct. 4. (AP)—The State Highway Commission met today to consider allocations for road construction during the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1939. The Commission heard delegations from various parts of the State.

The largest delegation—representing the counties of Charlotte, Brunswick, Mecklenburg and Lunenburg—asked that a bridge be built across the Staunton river in order to give these counties more direct access to the Staunton River State Park.

Members of the delegation said some residents of these counties now must travel 60 miles to reach the park, whereas this would be reduced to 15 miles if a bridge were constructed over the river at the proper place.

Lutherans Will Debate Bishop Plan

Baltimore Is Host Session Opens Today 600 Are Expected Represent 1,500,000

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 4.—More than 300 delegates registered tonight for the biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church in America, to be held here through October 12.

The theme of the convention, the "anniversary appeal for evangelism and church extension," is the principal feature of the twentieth anniversary celebration of the merger of the three major Lutheran bodies in America in 1918.

Of paramount interest to delegates is the report of a special commission on whether the church shall have bishops and archbishops. Sharp debate is expected among the 600 delegates, who will represent 1,500,000 members in 4,000 congregations of 42 States, the territories and the provinces of Canada.

Proponents of the plan contend its adoption would give the United Lutheran church the same form of church government now in force among the majority of the 70,000,000 Lutherans in the rest of the world. Its opponents contend the church should adhere to the "democratic" form of government in its entirety.

Should the change be made, the Rev. Dr. Frederick Knubel, now president of the church, would become an archbishop and presidents of the 31 constituent synods would be designated as bishops.

President, J. Milton Deck, Philadelphia; first vice president, Lawrence F. Speckman, Louisville, Ky.; second vice president, Erwin H. List, Chicago; third vice president, Glenn R. Edgar, Charleston, W. Va.; secretary, O. Roy Frankenfield, Philadelphia; treasurer, Harry A. Fritsch, Allentown, Pa.

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1938 ***

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Oct. 4.—In a locker room session where the monster greed governed, the Cubs yesterday lost the World Series starting tomorrow. At least, that is the word flashed by the series psychologists and always on World Series eve there is a psychologist peeping from behind every post.

POVICH.

They are strange folk. For such prosaic facts as batting averages and pitching percentages they have little use. They must burrow into the mental processes and ferret out moods, attitudes and chemical reactions. Not until they have a circumstance to interpret are they completely happy.

Until yesterday when the Cubs went into session in their Wrigley Field locker room to vote on the distribution of their World Series shares, the psychologists were literally starving for an attitude to construe. Their frenzied search for to tell-tale evidence of cause and effect had turned up only one meager tidbit.

They were faced with predicating their World Series prediction on Bill Dickey's frame of mind. How would the illness of Dickey's three favorite bird dogs, Sadie, Polly and Tillie, influence the series results?

2 Schools of Thought

And among the psychologists there were two schools of thought on that point.

One group held out stoutly that the mange, or whatever it was that struck down Sadie, Polly and Tillie, would cost the Yankees the World Series. "A Dickey overcome by grief will be a terrible handicap to the Yankees," was their warning. "We can see nothing but victory for the Cubs, perhaps in four straight games."

Just as stubbornly, the second group maintained that Sadie, Polly and Tillie would win series for the Yankees, and their spokesman was emphatic.

"In times like this, Dickey's concern for his bird dogs is a factor that points to a Yankee triumph. It reveals Dickey's complete lack of tension with respect to the series. That is a favorable sign. We foresee an easy victory for the Yankees.

But the psychologists were nevertheless, unhappy. The temperature of Dickey's bird dogs was an elusive straw at which they had been grasping. It was at best a synthetic substitute for a real, meaty psychological angle.

But at this writing, all is well again. Sadie, Polly and Tillie have been discarded as potent influences in the 1938 world series. Heavier stuff is at hand the boys are in complete accord.

'We Have It!'

A spokesman strode into world-series headquarters tonight and shouted, "Eureka" which, of course, is the sieg heil of all practicing psychologists. "We have it," he thundered.

"You have what?—that little yellow basket?" some heretic asked.

"Yes. No-no. Folls. This is no time for levity. We have it. The Yankees will win the world series. On that we are agreed. Developments have been such that the Cubs cannot win. They have delivered themselves into the hands of the enemy."

Even before the series has started.

"Yes," and he drew the word out with a hissing sound as an all-wise look spread over his countenance. "The Cubs are lost. The signs are definite. Hist, now, and let me explain.

Remember Mr. Koenig?

"As if the Yankees did not have enough ammunition in their own right, the Cubs have provided them with more. Yesterday when the Cubs greedily refused to cut former Manager Charley Grimm in for even a half share of the series they tempted a demanding, unyielding fate. For that they will probably pay.

"Remember 1932 and Mark Koenig? Remember how the stingy Cubs voted him only a half share of the series despite the fact that he had sparked the team to the pennant after joining them in the last half of the season? The Yankees made capital of that. Babe Ruth, in a speech to the Cubs' bench, shamed them, called 'em the squeeze-the-eagle Cubs. The Cubs' stinginess fired the Yankees to new heights. Babe Ruth called his home run shot and the Yankees won the series in four straight games.

"This year, the Cubs have not learned their lesson. Grimm, manager for half the season, was cut off without a penny. The Yankees' batting practice pitcher was voted a full share which may be as high as $6,000. The Cubs cut their batting practice pitcher with a flat $1,300.

"There is fodder there for the Yankees. They will remind the Cubs of their penny-pinching and it will go hard with the Cubs. It will go very hard with the Cubs, we tell you. It will upset 'em. Shame and remorse will ride with the Cubs in this series. Only such things are World Series won and lost. We have said it!"

Clear Day Forecast For Series Game

With all eyes turning to Chicago today and predictions running thick ad fast for the opening game of the World Series between the Chicago Cubs and the New York Yankees, the United States Weather Bureau here yesterday went out on a limb by saying there will be no rain in Chicago today.

The Terror of the American League . . . . New York Yankees' Power

Newspaper 'Experts' Overboard on Yanks

Vote Is 2-1 in Favor of New York
Chicago Held an Impotent Club
Nation's Top Writers Sounded

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—By a vote of more than 2 to 1—the approximate betting odds—the "experts" in the press box climbed out on the limb today and picked the New York Yankees to whip the Chicago Cubs in a World Series lasting no more than six games.

Those who picked Gabby Hartnett's underdogs refused, for the most part, to give an ysound reason for it. Perhaps Cy Peterman, Philadelphia Inquirer columnist, sounded the keynote in explaining "it's just a hunch." He picked the Cubs in seven games.

A few others of those who were aboard the Cubs were doubtful after watching the New York sluggers in batting practice today, but they decided to stand by their guns, anyway.

The large majority which went for the Yanks figured Gehrig and company wouldn't need more than six games. Many had the idea five would do, and a couple of hardy souls went all out with the Yanks in four.

ED COCHRANE, sports editor, Chicago Evening American—Yankees in six.

FRANK GRAHAM, New York Sun columnist—the same here. Too much power.

CHARLES SEGAR, New York Mirror—we'll blow them out of the park. Four straight for New York.

SHIRLEY POVICH, Washington Post—Yankees in five.

GENE MOORE, Boston Globe—the Yanks will be carried to six games, then win.

CHARLES DOYLE, Pittsburgh

Of the contending players' purse, 60 per cent goes to the series winner, 40 per cent to the loser.

Ban Grimm From Radio On Series

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Charlie Grimm, displaced as Chicago Cub manager and then cut out of a share of the player's World Series pool, also is out so far as broadcasting the series which opens tomorrow between the Cubs and New York Yankees.

His studio revealed today that because of his recent connection with the National League, Commissioner K. M. Landis ruled Grimm could not broadcast the games. Both President Ford Frick of the National League and President Will Harridge of the American League asked the commissioner to rescind his ruling, but the commissioner stood pat.

This should be one of the biggest money series in the game's history. A fortune of $659,000 already is in the Cub strongbox. Of this sum $219,667 will be rebated if the series is decided in four or five games. Whether the total receipts for the entire series will exceed that of the Cub-Tiger six-game series in 1935, $1,073,794, is problematical. But with Yankee Stadium's 70,029 and the Cub capacity of 44,466, the individual player's share may go to $7,000 each for the winners and $4,500 for the losers.

Stock market note: The 10,000 shares of Cub stock increased $300,000 in market value in the wake of the team's pennant surge. Quoted at 148 bid and 152 asked a week ago, the stock soared to 165 bid and 175 asked, then jumped again with one sale at 180.

When the Yankees came to town, Manager Joe McCarthy and Mrs. McCarthy posed amiably for photographers until someone asked him for a series prediction, to which he yelled: "No! No!" and bolted away.

Later, Joe confided he was sorry for his old pal, Hartnett. Some fan yelled at Lou Gehrig: "Lou, you'll need a rabbit's foot," to which the husky New York first sacker replied with a grin, "don't worry, I got one," and pulled a bunny's paw right out of his pocket.

Red Ruffing, tomorrow's Yankee pitching choice and winner of 21 games this season for the Yanks, became mixed up in the milling at the station and was separated from the main Yank hotel-bound party. Grabbing the arm of a policeman, he asked the shortest way to reach the Yank hostelry on the North Side and received prompt directions. A minute later someone told the bluecoat he had been talking to Ruffing, powerful Yank pitcher.

"Huh," grunted the officer, "maybe I should have started him for Kokomo, Ind."

Series Trip Takes Arch to Pittsburgh

It's No Mistake, Just Train Switch
Saddest in Chicago Is Buc President
Can 'General' Lee Whip the Yanks?

By Arch McDonald,
WJSV Baseball Commentator.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 4.—The World Series trip took me to Pittsburgh after all. It seems that's where they switch engines en route to Chicago. My Pittsburgh World Series business was finished up in ten minutes last night. That attack of Buc fever which caused the Pirates to retire from the arena, rerouted us to Wrigley Field.

But, all kidding aside, the saddest man in Chicago tonight was Bill Benswanger, owner of the Jitter Bucs. Grateful for the sympathies extended him by baseball friends here, Benswanger said he felt as if he had lost an only son and retained only fond memories of baby shoes and toys that would be forever stilled.

McDONALD.

Chicago fans think Lee will beat the Yankees tomorrow, but if he does he's a wonder. Back at Appomattox 73 years ago we never thought he'd try a comeback!

If the Cubs lose this World Series after dropping their last five, they ought to crawl into a hole. Better make that a Cub-by hole.

Two weeks ago officials of the Cubs telegraphed the Pittsburgh club for two dozen balls autographed by "The Coming World Champions." They were to be used in a charity raffle. Today those two dozen autographed balls were used by the Cubs in batting practice. Honest.

Hartnett rushed his Cubs out of Wrigley Field before the Yankees took batting practice today, which was an excellent idea. The Cubs might have decided to forfeit if they had seen those Yankees bang out the mess of batting practice homers that followed.

Cub officials have announced that two sound trucks with amplifiers will be on the field from 9 a. m. to 1:15 p. m. tomorrow to direct the fans how to reach their seats. With a little overtime pay Wrigley might get the sound men to stick around and direct the Cubs how to get to first base against Ruffing.

When Dizzy Dean wrote his recent magazine article, "They Made Me a Clown," he was referring to the owners of the St. Louis Cardinals. Immediately after he pitches against the Yankees he may be able to begin his sequel.

One of the meanest tricks in recent World Series history was the Cubs' action of including Charley Grimm out of the World Series split. Poor Charley will now have to struggle along on the $25,000 he received from Wrigley (for not managing the Cubs) and the $20,000 (WJSV bosses please note) he dragged down for his radio baseball broadcasts.

200 Series Contests Drew $21,020,629

...The gate receipts at 200 World series games played since 1902 total $21,020,629. This amount was paid by 6,585,349 spectators. There have been eight $1,000,000 series play, in 1923, '24, '25, '266, '31, '34, '35 and '36. The biggest gate was accomplished in 1926, when the Cardinals and Yankees waged a seven-game classic which was watched by 328,851 fans, who paid $1,207,864.

go's Bill Lee, of Plaquemine, La., whom Manager Gabby Hartnett late this afternoon nominated as his first-game pitching choice. And it is being hailed as Hartnett's logical choice, for it was Lee who, pitching on five consecutive days in the breathless National League finish, paced the Cubs on their pennant surge.

If the Yankee power is to be throttled, Lee is the chap best equipped to do the job, for in his record of 22 victories and 9 defeats are no less than 9 shutout triumphs.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees, back on the scene of his triumphs as a National League manager, today set the stage for an entirely fitting World Series opener when he designated big Charley Ruffing as his pitcher for tomorrow.

League Leaders Opposed

Thus the 44,000 who will jam Wrigley Field tomorrow will see as pitching opponents the two men who led their respective leagues, for Ruffing with his 21 victories against 7 defeats was tops among American League hurlers.

McCarthy was supposed to be wavering between Ruffing and Lefty Gomez as his pitching choice tomorrow, but when he announced Ruffing tonight he declared that the portly righthander had always been his first-game selection.

"Ruffing is bigger and stronger than Gomez," said McCarthy. "When and if it gets to the point where my first-game pitcher will have to take a second start in the series, Ruffing would be a better bet than Gomez."

Hartnett, in nominating Lee, not only justified preseries predictions but set at rest reports that he would make a surprise gesture by starting the series with Dizzy Dean. "This is no time to pull our punches," said Hartnett. "We're throwing in our best pitchers and Lee is the man for tomorrow's job. Dean will get his chance later."

200,000 Welcome Team

Despite the wild acclaim of the Cubs by the Chicago populace, 300,000 of whom turned out in a gigantic welcome-home parade yesterday, there persists beneath the surface in some quarters the fear that the Yankee long range sluggers might pound out one more disappointment for the Cubs, which have lost their last five world series.

At Wrigley Field today, where both teams took their final workouts, the Yankees, as usual, staged the superior batting practice show. Into the Wrigley Field bleachers and over the Wrigley Field fences, Bill Dickey, Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig, Frankie Crosetti and George Selkirk hammered practice homers.

The Yankees' display made the Cubs' efforts appear puny in contrast. The lone Cubs to knock the ball out of the lot were Tony Lazzeri and Rookie Jim Asbell. Lazzeri is fated to appear in the series against his erstwhile Yankee teammates only as a pinch-hitter and Outfielder Asbell may not break into the line-up.

All down the line the Yankees loom as a superior slugging crew despite the paradox of the team batting averages, which show the Yankees to be .274 hitters and the Cubs a .271 outfit.

Yankee Bats Potent

It is the length and productive qualities of the Yankees' hits, plus such potent pitching packages as Gomez, Ruffing and Monte Pearson, which has constrained the betting folk to install the Yanks as top-heavy favorites.

The threat of the Yankee home run is apparent in the comparative team figures which show 174 Yankee homers during 1938 to 65 for the Cuubs. The figures show, too, 2,410 total bases for the Yankees to 2,017 for the Cubs. Joe DiMaggio has driven in twice as many runs this season as Stanley Hack, the leading Cub run-producer, who has fetched 67 teammates across the plate.

Count on Team Spirit

But on the Cubs' spirit and enthusiasm the Chicago fans are counting heavily. They have been completely won by the late-season spurt of the Cubs, who had all but slipped out of the first division but launched a mad dash that carried them to the top with 21 victories in 25 games.

The Cubs, however, lost some of their power en route to the pennant. Augie Galan's injured leg, suffered in the last week, will keep him out of the series, and he was the second leading outfielder on the club.

Central High Defeats Western Eleven by 14 to 7 Score

Blue Rallies To Win After Slow Start

Overcomes Lead Passes Fly Rapidly Penalty Earns Point 3,000 Watch Game

The 1938 edition of Western High football team, expected to take Eastern's place at the head of the scholoboy football series this year, ran into a scrappy Central eleven yesterday and lost the game by a convincing 14-to-7 score.

The Central delegation, getting under way late in the second period with the score already 7 to 0 against it, took one of Western's punts at exact midfield, and with Jim Clark, right wing, taking the ball on two profitable end-around plays, moved to Western's 3-yard line. Clark made gains of 16 and 15 yards on the two plays, and the rest of the distance was picked up by Benny Steiner in two plunges and a Western off-side penalty. Steiner then passed directly into the arms of Dick Farr for the tally and followed that effort with a successful placement.

Then, in the third period, Central took a lead it never relinquished. With half the period played, Western's right halfback, Frank Draper, suffered a case of butter fingers on his own 25-yard line and Shannon Cramer, one of Central's two remaining lettermen of 1937, fell on the ball. From there the Blue moved directly down the field to the 6-yard marker from whence Jimmy Porter, after three tries by Steiner, lugged the leather over.

Gets Point by Error

Central's fourteenth point came about through an error in timing on the part of Coach Moore, of Western. He sent Substitute Stone into the game while the ball was in play and Central got its second try at the extra point. The first was blocked, but the second, a low pass from Steiner to Clark, was good.

The lone marker scored by Western gave the game the appearance of a walk-away for the Raiders. Western elected to boot the opening kickoff, and Tony Di Blasi, the receiver, was stopped in his tracks. After several unsuccessful attempts to move ahead, Central kicked, but the attempt was partly blocked. Taking possession of the pigskin on Central's 22, Western moved in short but consistent gains down the field, George Barnes plunging over for the score. Dwyer converted.

The game was marked by more than the average quota of passes, Western attempting no less than 16 in the final period alone. Of that number, three were completed, one was intercepted, and the other 12 were wide. George Barnes carried the passing attack of Western, but it was Central's tight aerial defense which accounted for his failure to make a better showing rather than Barnes' ineffectiveness.

Western's triple-threater, Barnes, and Fullback Renny Lawrence were the main factors ni holding Central to the one-touchdown victory. The only injury of any consequence occurred in the third stanza when Alex Dematitus, left end of Western, was withdrawn with an injured leg. He finally walked to the showers under his own power, though.

'Laterals' Movie Stunt, Says Baugh

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh
Forward Passing Champion National Football League.

SAMMY BAUGH.

Among my disillusionments after I joined up with pro football last year was the business of lateral passing. Never having seen a pro football game until I played in one, I imagined that lateral passing played a huge part in a pro team's offense.

I know now that I had been watching too many newsreel shorts about pro football. The moving pictures of the pros, notably the Chicago Bears and the Green Bay Packers, always presented the flashy lateral-passing shots and it was only natural that I should think of the pros in terms of laterals.

Undoubtedly a huge percentage of the country's football fans were given the same impression. In the movies the pros double-passed and triple-passed and a half dozen players would be handling the ball on one play.

But I discovered since joining the Redskins that that sort of stuff is only for the movies. The pros don't go in for lateral passing on any kind of a wide scale when that opening whistle blows in a league game. They prefer safe and sane football, and I have an idea that there is more lateral passing among the colleges than among the pros.

Ray Flaherty, coach of the Redskins, is recognized as one of the soundest of all football coaches. As a pro player he never was on a team that finished worse than second in his section of the league, and in two years as coach of the Redskins he landed one Eastern division title and one National championship, which is pretty close to par.

In fact, there is a standing fine on the Redskins for any player who attempts a lateral pass at any stage of the game. It costs the player $25. We don't have a play on the Redskins that calls for a lateral and when I say that I'm not giving away any team secrets, because every professional coach knows that Flaherty is dead set against laterals.

His reasons are logical enough. He doesn't believe in the lateral pass, first, because it's usually a dangerous play, and, second, because he thinks it isn't sound. Any player in position to take a lateral pass is there as a rule only because he has missed a blocking assignment.

Flaherty doesn't want his downfield blockers watching out for the chance to take a lateral pass. He wants 'em down there blocking and he wants the man who is carrying the ball to concentrate on carrying the ball, not star-gazing for somebody to throw it to when he is about to be tackled.

There isn't much doubt that the other professional coaches feel the same way about it. It's my estimate that there has not been over a dozen lateral passes thrown by the ten-team pro league since the season started a month ago.

But every once in a while a college team emphasizes the lateral pass in its attack. According to my information, it was a great part of Harvard's offense several years ago. But an alert team is apt to ram a lateral passing attack down the throats of a club which is using it.

I took time off the other day and saw a college team that was actually lateral-pass crazy. At one point the team made a 50-yard gain and a touchdown with the ball carrier lateraling to a teammate on the 20-yard line and the teammate lateraling to another teammate as he was about to be tackled on the 3-yard line.

The play ended up in a touchdown, as I was saying, but somebody should have told those football players that first down on the 3-yard line is a pretty good position to be in. That last lateral is best classed as a stupid gamble, despite the fact it was successful.

Redskins Send Tuckey to Rams For League's $10 Waiver Price

'Skins Drilling Hard Giants Pack Punch Flaherty Preparing

Dick Tuckey, Redskin rookie halfback who gave promise of developing into one of the National Football League's outstanding ball toters early in September and then faded like a double exposure, last night was sent to cleveland via the waiver route.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty expressed no regrets at losing the lad dubbed the "Manhattan Madman," but paid him the tribute of being a good football player.

"He simply didn't fit in with our offense," Flaherty said, "and Cleveland needed a passing back, so we let them have him."

The freckled Redskin master denied it was a friendly gesture on Washington's part, or that any cash consideration other than the $10 waiver fee was involved. He also denied a report that he is seeking a back to replace the traded player.

"We don't have too many passing backs," he admitted when it was suggested that the club might be overloaded with them. "No team can have too many. Tuckey simply didn't click with us, and we let him go. No, I'm not trying to make a deal for another back; that is, no one in particular. Naturally, if I see a chance to get an outstanding player I'll grab him, but right now I'm not looking for one."

The Redskins yesterday began pointing for Sunday's important game with the Giants, working on new offensive tactics designed especially for this game. Flaherty flew to New York to see the New Yorkers bow to Pittsburgh, 13-10, and got a good line on the enemy. Ned Irish, New York publicity man, laid the Giants' defeat to carelessness.

DICK TUCKEY.

"They were looking forward to the Washington game," he told the football writers at their weekly luncheon, "and merely couldn't get worked up to the proper key for Pittsburgh."

Sunday's game will be the fourteenth between the teams in a series inaugurated back in 1932. Washington, under Flaherty's direction, has won three in a row, but the Giants still hold an edge in the all-time standings with a record of six victories against five defeats and one tie.

Didn't Fit In Offense May Help Cleveland Rookie Has Pomise

The Redskins last year rolled up the largest score ever recorded in a league game in whipping the Giants for the Eastern championship, bowling them over by a 49-14 count at New York. That was the game in which Cliff Battles literally covered himself with glory, running wild through the bewildered and disorganized Giants.

Washington fans will see an innovation in football Sunday when the visiting team huddles while on the defense. This is supposed to help stop enemy thrusts. They will also see two former George Washington favorites in action, Tuffy Leemans and Ray Hanken. Leemans is playing his same consistent game, but Hanken, an end, is going better than ever. He is regarded as a lock-bet to win all-league recognition this season.

Mel Hein, veteran lineman named on the last five consecutive all-league teams and a former teammate of Turk Edwards at Washington, is one of the Giants' outstanding stars. Hein directs the defense from the huddle.

New York will arrive here late this afternoon after practicing earlier in the day on its home grounds. The squad will drill tomorrow and Friday afternoons at Griffith Stadium and again on Saturday morning. It will stay at the Willard Hotel.

Redskins officials announced last night that every reserved seat in the park has been sold for Sunday's game, but 15,000 unreserved seats will be placed on sale this morning at the stadium.

Conquer Wins Annapolis Purse, Laurel Track Feature; Pays $3.60

Takes Race Easily for 4th Straight

Gilbert Rides Winner Clingendaal Second Bootless Is Third 6,000 See Events

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 4.—Horses are still chasing Conquer. Today, the Victorian gelding made it four straight victories by leading five other good routers home in the Annapolis Purse, serving feature purposes before 6,000 customers. With Jockey Johnny Gilbert in the saddle and carrying the bulk of the wagering, Conquer made every post a winning one to return a mere $3.60 for each $2 investment.

Giving away from three to seven pounds, Conquer won drawing away with ease after the trip around the mile and one-sixteenth course. He turned in the time of 1:44 4-5 and could have clipped that if he had been pressed through the stretch.

Clingendale, representing A. C. Compton, furnished the chief contention in the field. He kept close to Conquer's pace for three-quarters of a mile before surrendering when Gilbert put Conquer to a drive for a spell. Clingendaal then faded but was good enough to hold Bootless safe. The last named was miserably handled.

Court Counsel, fourteenth in the Eastern Shore Handicap at Havre de Grace, found the maiden field in the first race to his liking and won by a neck over Battle Hymn with Rosepillar, the favorite, third. The crowd bet Rossman, a first-time starter, as if the race had already been run and the Timemaker gelding stopped after setting the early pace. Court Counsel paid $16.90.

For the second day, Trainer J. T. Skinner and Jockey E. Roberts took charge of the steeplechase event. They were commanding the racing of Prattler and the $5.50 favorite won by three-quarters of a length from Redshank. Promoter was third. Swimalong set the pace but was far back at the finish.

Alexandrine made no mistake in the third race. The St. James filly had the speed when asked to win going away by a length. Master Lad came from far back on the outside to be second, while Teddy's Star lasted to be third. The winner, ridden by Jockey L. Hardy, paid $10.90.

Lady Solace, owned and trained by Donald Christmas, scored the first victory of her career in the fourth race, fashioned for 2-year-olds and 5½ furlongs. With Jockey F. Scheih doing the booting, Lady Solace led My Shadow, a long shot in the "field" to the wire by a length and a half. Nancy Reed came from far back to be third to the $9.50 shot.

Picking up here where he left off at Havre de Grace, White Sand scored an easy victory in the sixth race under the guidance of Jockey Ralph Eccard. He came from far back and jogged to the front on the outside entering the stretch. San Antioca, still farther back in the early running, was second with Carnage third. White Sand paid $7.80.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COURT COUNSEL, $16.90, $10.30, $4.10; BATTLE HYMN, $13.30, $5.20; ROSE PILLAR, $2.40.
COURT COUNSEL, first away and rated closest to ROSSMAN'S pace, took command when asked, but had to be kept to pressure to stave off closing bid of BATTLE HYMN. The latter raced wide for racing room to stretch, responded to pressure to be wearing down winner at end. ROSE PILLAR raced forwardly on inside from start, but weakened. BULLET B showed a good effort. REBELLIOUS made up much ground from a slow beginning. CHIEF ONWAY went evenly. FOREVER GREEN was held safe. ROSSMAN quit from hard rushing while setting pace.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:06½. Off 2:09. Winner, R. E. McConnell's ch. g. (6), by Pick of the Circus—Pop Cane. Trained by J. T. Skinner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:54 4-5. (14 jumps.)

PRATTLER, under restraint and closest to pace of SWIMALONG for turn of course, took command when put to drive, bore out after making final jump, but recovered and outgamed REDSHANK on flat. REDSHANK, allowed to race on own courage for mile while saving ground, responded to drive while fencing nicely, but could not resist winner after taking slight lead between calls. PROMOTER saved ground throughout, but weakened in closing half. LITTLE WOMAN went evenly. FLYING FALCON had no mishaps. SWIMALONG landed badly at third fence while setting pace and tired badly after a mile. PERSIAN PRINCE and DUN LUCKY were outrun.

ALEXANDRINE, forward factor from start, responded to drive entering stretch to dispose of PATSEY BEGONE and was kept to pressure to end. MASTER LAD lacked early speed, came around field boldly while improving position and closed willingly. TEDDY'S STAR raced GRAEME CRACKER into defeat, but could not resist others. PATSEY BEGONE set pace and weakened. DIP broke in tangle and was in trouble repeatedly. SOME COUNT closed willingly. GURKHA had early speed and stopped.

LADY SOLACE, steadied along while close up for quarter, responded with good courage when put to drive, drew clear and was kept to pressure to end. MY SHADOW, off poorly, came through on rail to enter contention, but hung in closing furlong. NANCY REED lacked racing room in early stages and closed full of run on inside. MYSTERY MISS was rushed to front and tired. MACIE MARGARET closed with rush from slow beginning. OF COURSE pressed early pace and stopped. LICKETYSPLIT had good early speed and faltered.

CLINGENDAAL was hard ridden throughout and weakened gradually through stretch. BOOTLESS was pulled up going to first turn when in close quarters, moved up menacingly on outside, was slightly bothered by UNHERALDED entering stretch and weakened thereafter. GENIE PALATINE was held safe. SIR JIM JAMES was pulled up at first turn when forced wide and failed to rally.

WHITE SAND, allowed to settle into best stride, came to outside for racing room, took command without effort and won with speed in reserve. SAN ANTIOCA, trailer for half, improved position when asked and was next best. CARNAGE weakened after moving up menacingly at far turn. CHAINWICK went well placed for half and quit. NANSEMOND was used up forcing DIPLOMACY'S pace. DIPLOMACY quit to a walk.

BLACK GROUSE, in thick of contention from start, saved ground entering stretch to wear down TONI and was kept to strong hand ride. TONI disposed of SCARLET O to take command, set strong pace and held on willingly. PANALONG, outrun for half, came with a rush thereafter and closed fastest of all. NEW DEAL, close up from start, weakened in stretch run. ARMY AND NAVY rallied only mildly. SCARLET O was through early. AMGOOD had early speed.

St. Louis Club Loses In Suit for $4,000

St. Louis, Oct. 4 (AP).—Mel Ott's bat, which has always caused trouble for the Cardinals, now may cost the St. Louis Baseball Club $4,000.

The St. Louis Court of Appeals today affirmed a verdict for that amount awarded Mrs. Frank Olds, who was struck by a foul ball hit by the New York Giants' outfielder in a game here in 1932.

Bob Blanding Solves Fullback Problem

Lexington, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—One reason the fullback position is affording Washington and Lee coaches no great problem is that Bob Blanding, of Roanoke, can capably fill blocking and running assignments.

Blanding was a fullback in scholastic competition at Jefferson High at Roanoke and has remained one ever since. A starter in all the Washington and Lee freshman games last season, he materially aided the Brigadiers to sweep through their State schedule undefeated.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Dear Al: Selections at Laurel.

John Hay Whitney is going in for trainers in a big way. As if he already didn't have Bill Norton and Big Jim Healey as horse conditioners, the wealthy sportsman has added Earl Sande, the former saddle great to his line-up. Sande signed yesterday and will be in charge of about ten horses for campaigning at Pimlico, Bowie and Santa Anita. Sande, of course, will remain in charge of the Maxwell Howard string, which includes Stagehand and The Chief. Mrs. John Hay Whitney recently signed Dion Kerr, of Washington, as trainer of her horses. Jockey Seabo will be out of action for a couple of days. Thrown by Pause at the start of a sprint here Monday, Seabo was bruised and was too lame yesterday to accept mounts. Nat Gladstone is making saddle engagements for Joe Renick, contract rider for E. R. Bradley and a recent arrival here. Lucky Teeter, whose "Hell Drivers" have thrilled the crowds at Maryland fairs, has entered the racing game and purchased Jolyon from W. Zakoor. Jockey No Boy Jacobs, everybody's friend, got in from New York loaded with sandwiches. Jake had some nice pictures of Porter's Mite winning the Belmont Futurity. He said to tell his friends, "I ain't doing no good." Ralph Watts brought his horses in from Wheeling and will race out the season in Maryland before going to Charles Town for the session there beginning on December 1. Maxine is a late addition to Starter Milton's schooling list, which now totals 24 horses. Clocker Mike is going to try to chase Cornwallis home today, while Sally Sidesaddle will be rooting for Lady Maryland. BILL.

First race—Blaze Around was slow to get going in excellent company at Havre de Grace and then closed gamely to be third. With a better start, this one may take it all. Fairy Vale was a live horse in a recent allowance race and is going to awake mighty soon. Hearsay made his first start at the other track and money showed for him.

Second race—War Peril was 15-1 in a Rockingham handicap and finished third. Appears nicely placed among these maidens. Fairy Dale, a Foxcatcher horse, which was third in his last in New York at even money, looms as a serious contender. Aetholwold is a consistent money horse and could gain a set of brackets here.

Third race—Time Signal takes off four pounds after finishing third in a Class D handicap in New York. Appears to have found the right company for this. Rye Beach, another New York campaigner, should be prominent. Pretty Pet scored with lighter weight at Havre de Grace.

Fourth race—Black Wave has some good races in the book although her last in New England was a poor effort. If away well, this one may take all the marbles. Happy Code downed good ones upstate and is dangerous. Lady Maryland was a consistent mare during the summer and is a threat among these.

Fifth race—Sun Egret, second in the Capital Handicap, seems the best of these high class sprinters. I'm going to string along. Aneroid probably needed that last and is dangerous on a fast track. Accolade was fourth in a Belmont handicap.

Sixth race—Cornwallis is dropping down for this spot and I see no reason for mistakes. Sea Gull is fit nd ready for the best. Golden Vein, in rare form, will be hard to force out of the pay circle.

Seventh race—America First has been running in much better company. If he doesn't beat these they should send him back to the farm. High Tension comes from a stable hard ti guess. Patchpocket, a doubtful starter, would be a factor if in action.

Best bet—America First.

Latonia Feature Won by He Said

Latonia, Ky., Oct. 4 (AP).—The colors of A. G. Tarn, Illinois sportsman, flashed to a popular victory here this afternoon as He Said, 2-year-old son of Whichmount and Lady Champ, accounted for the featured three-quarters of a mile dash.

Grabbing an early lead and maintaining it throughout, He Said raced to the wire with a neck advantage over Reidinger Brothers' Detector. At no time was the winner more than a half length in front. Third money went to Scotch Trap, from the stables of G. W. Peak, which came from far back in the stretch to nose out Max Forst.

He Said was backed from an opening of 4 to 1 into staunch favoritism and paid his backers $4.40. He stepped the six furlongs in the excellent time of 1:12 2-5.

Seabiscuit, Admiral May Race

Howard Posts Forfeit Conference Set Today Pimlico to Be Site

War Admiral and Seabiscuit may be matched for a race at Pimlico before nightfall today. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, vice president of the Maryland Jockey Club, will have lunch with Samuel D. Riddle, War Admiral's owner, and it is believed that Riddle will sign for the match race after a talk with the popular Maryland turf official. If War Admiral is to race Seabiscuit, Riddle would have to put up $5,00 in forfeit money, and intimates say that he would do so.

Charles S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, already has posted forfeit money with the Maryland Jockey Club and is eager for the race, according to Tom Smith, his trainer.

"I expect word sometime tomorrow afternoon as to whether I'm to begin pointing Seabiscuit for the match race," Smith said yesterday at Laurel. Smith indicated that Howard was ready to agree to any conditions for the race which were within reason.

"I expect Mr. Riddle will want a walk-up start and may demand that down for the race," said Smith. "I a New York starter be brought do not object to this, but the horses must be free of assistant starters. I feel that Seabiscuit is good right now and that he would have lowered the Havre de Grace track record had he not been bothered at the first turn."—HAIGHT.

Our Guest Selector

Army's Full Squad Will Face Columbia

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 3 (AP).—Army's varsity team, at full strength after the Virginia Tech game, limbered up with a signal drill today. The short Monday period did not allow the regulars to go into the defense to be used against Columbia Saturday but the Jayvees practiced Columbia plays to try against the varsity tomorrow. The starting team which opened the season against Wichita remained unchanged although a few shifts have been made in the second lineup.

1925 Race Ticket Brings Fan $2.40

Laurel, Md., Oct. 4.—J. A. McDermott, giving a Baltimore home address, walked up to the "outstanding tickets" window today to cash a show ticket. The cashier took his name and address and promised to mail him a check if the ticket were redeemable.

Investigation showed that the pasteboard was on a horse named Johnny Campbell which ran third at the 1925 meeting. McDermott, a member of the crew of an oil tanker now docked in Baltimore, will receive a check for $2.40, the amount the horse paid.

Our Crest Winner

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—Our Crest, racing into the lead in the stretch, outlasted Horagina, a long shot, to win the Springfield Purse at Hawthorne today by a nose. Millie M was third. Our Crest, owned by Mrs. J. A. Nix, of Texas, and ridden by Kenneth McCombs, ran the 6 furlongs in 1:11 4-5 and paid $6.20.

Mrs. Pray Is Beaten 1 Up, by Mrs. Daily

Upset Marks Club Title Play at Manor
Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Platt Win Medals
Favorites Come Through in Matches

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Mrs. David H. Clark, with an 83 at Army and Navy, and Mrs. Landra Platt, who scored an 89 over the lengthy Chevy Chase course, added their names to the medalists as "women's club championship week" continued yesterday at eight clubs. Manor was the scene of the only distinct upset of the various match-play rounds, when Mrs. J. R. Daily defeated co-medalist and the '37 finalist, Mrs. L. G. Pray.

Favorites won at Congressional, Kenwood and Woodmont, while Mrs. J. F. Gross, medalist, lost to Mrs. F. G. Crisp in a mild upset at Columbia. Mrs. W. R. Stokes defeated Mrs. K. S. Giles in a soncolation encounter at Indian Spring, in the only match of the day.

Mrs. Clark, former Virginia State champion and two-time medalist and club champion at Army and Navy, played the par 36 outgoing nine in 38 and returned in 45 for an 83 to easily annex the medalist honors at the service club. Mrs T. J. Jhonson, defending champion, qualified and meets Mrs. F. W. King today.

Mrs. Platt's 89 was low by a single stroke at Chevy Chase, as Mrs. Bishop Hill, playing in defense of her title, was only a stroke back with 9. A 93 by Miss Louise Claytor and 94s by Mrs. Y. E. Booker, Miss Susan Hacker and Mrs. L. O. Cameron were among the low score. The Sheridan Cup goes to the winner.

Mrs. Myron Davy and Helen Dettweiler each won by 6 and 4 margins at Congressional, while the 1937 titleholder, Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, won, 7 and 6, as one-sided matches were the order of the day. Miss Dettweiler needed par for a 76.

Mrs. Crisp upset Mrs. Gross by a 5 and 4 margin at Columbia, while Mrs. H. M. Brundage and Mrs. Merrill Lord, favorites, were victorious.

Medalist Mrs. J. C. Dale and Defending Champion Mrs. A. A. McEntee were not extended at Kenwood, winning by 6 and 5 up margins.

Mrs. Daily upset Mrs. Pray on the eighteenth green at Manor, as Marion Brown, present Indian Spring and Manor champion, moved nearer a successful defense of her title at the Norbeck club.

Injured Anacostia Player Still Is in Hospital

Robert "Flash" Gordon, halfback of Anacostia High School's Football Team, was still in Providence Hospital today after having been carried there from Monday's Anacostia-Woodrow Wilson game. He was said by attendants to be resting easily.

Young Gordon's left leg was X-rayed yesterday and findings will be released today. His leg was originally injured more than a week ago in a game with Gonzaga High.

C. U.-B. C. Game Is Doubtful

Arthur J. Berman, football coach and director of athletics at Catholic University, expressed surprise yesterday on reading that he had conferred Monday with Boston College representatives pertaining to a football game to be played between the two institutions here on October 15, the proceeds to be donated for relief of the flood sufferers in the Northern area.

Bergman said, however, that a certain group, led by Bill Connors, a Catholic University alumnus, suggested such a game for his approbation before contacting Boston College which also has an open date on that Saturday. Bergman favored the game but at the same seriously doubted that Boston College would accept. The Eagles are scheduled to meet Detroit October 12 and hardly would relish traveling such a distance to play a second hard game in four days.

Play 11-Inning Tie

21 Enter Open Play

Oliver, Cox Ready More Seen Today Play at Washington

Ed Oliver, Wilmington's rising young professional, and Wiffy Cox, Congressional's defending champion, head the list of entries for the District open championship that starts tomorrow with the first of two days' 36-hole rounds over the Washington Golf and Country Club course.

Additional entries that may enter with Gene Larkin or show up on the first tee tomorrow at Washington, are expected to more than double the field that now totals 21.

A conflict with the Bassett, Va., open and a pro-lady tournament in Philadelphia will rob the field of several outstanding players that would otherwise attend.

Andy Gibson, Maryland open champion from Bonnie View, and at least three other Baltimore players are expected to play.

Mt. Rainier Soccermen Beat Bladensburg, 4-0

Mount Rainier High School opened the soccer season yesterday on its home field with a decisive 4-0 victory over Bladensburg High School.

The Mounts broke the scoring ice in the second period when Jimmie Miller, center forward, took a pass from Malcolm Lynch and booted it in the net. In the third period the Mounts' last goal came about in a similar manner when Piny Catalina took a pass from Miller and scored. Frank Landolt's great defensive play for the victors was outstanding.

D. C. Golfers Will Travel

Play Baltimore Sunday Is Date Semifinal Here

Congressional's defending Maryland State Golf Association team champions will travel to Baltimore Sunday for their semifinal encounter with the Baltimore Country Club team over the Five Farms course.

In the all-local semifinal, Indian Spring, favored to reach the finals against Congressional, will meet Beaver Dam over the Four Corners course. The final match October 16 will be played over a neutral course.

Congressional, who won by a single point over Capital last Sunday, will face another strong opponent in the Baltimoreans, who have not been extended against Woodholme and Rodgers Forge. Jimmy Flattery is playing pro for the hosts, who also boast Edgar Lucas, Harry Parr, Donald McPhail, Don Miller, Jack Fulton and others.

In the feature match at Indian Spring Al Jamison and Roger Peacock meet Cliff Spencer and John P. Miller. The latter team has won 5½ of 6 points against Al Treder and Harry Pitt, and Leo Kernan and W. C. Waxter.

Cairo Is Named C. U. Track Leader

Frank Cariro, star weight man and also a regular tackle on the football team, has been elected captain of Catholic University's 1938-'39 track squad, Dorsey Griffith, track coach, announced yesterday.

Cairo, competing in the shotput and discus events last season was a consistent point-getter and led the Cardinals to their record of four victories against two defeats.

The Cardinal trackmen will be called out late this week and prospects are for the best season in the school's history, Griffith said. The board track, installed for the first time last year, helped the dash men no little, and this aid plus a bevy of returning veterans are the reasons for Griffith's optimism.

Navy's Lem Cooke Out With Injured Knee; May Not Play Saturday

Middy Ace Replaced for Virginia Tilt

McDaniel Will Start Gillette, Blaha Out Pass Drill Is Held Cavaliers Air-Minded

Annapolis, Oct. 4.—A broadside of bad news hit Navy's varsity amidships this afternoon when it was learned that Lem Cooke, key man in the Middies' attack, will not be able to face Virginia in the annual battle between the Tars and Cavaliers Saturday.

The Hernando Hurricane, a triple-threat back and the only ball-carrier of that classification on the entire squad, aggravated an old knee injury last week playing against V. M. I. and has been on the sidelines since. Lieut. C. R. Ball, team physician, prescribed rest for the ailing joint after examining it, and said it would be about a week before the knee would be normal.

But Cooke, whose passing has largely been responsible for Navy's success thus far, said he will be ready for duty Saturday. Head Coach Hank Hardwick intimated, however, that he would keep his ace on the bench unless his services are sorely needed. George (Sloppy) McDaniel, meanwhile, has replaced Cooke in the first team lineup, and will be in the starting backfield Saturday.

Ed Gillette and Frank Blaha, also backs, are on the sick list, and the latter will be out at least two weeks with a bad ankle. Gillette is expected to be ready by Saturday.

The varsity scrimmaged against the plebes more than an hour today in an effort to find ways and means of stopping Virginia's destructive and deceptive passes. The only eure for them seems to lie in equipping the entire Navy squad with butterfly nets and using everybody at one time.

Navy scouts returned from the Virginia-Washington and Lee game with reports that the Cavaliers have improved since tying V. M. I., and probably will be near their peak for Saturday's skirmish.

Virginia Eleven Busy for Navy

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va.—Virginia's football squad spend this afternoon learning several new running plays introduced by Coach Frank Murray for use against Navy. The usual scrimmage was cut short, with indications that the rough work would be limited for the rest of the week.

Harry McClaugherty ran with the first backfield, and Mosby Cardozo, his substitute of fast week, stayed there along with Jim Gillette and Jim Beveridge.

Virginia's ticket allotment for the game disappeared two days ago in the face of enthusiasm engendered by the tie with V. M. I. and the victory over Washington and Lee.

Injured Orange Back Ready for Maryland

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 4 (AP).—Cliff Wilson, sophomore halfback, returned to action today as Syracuse's vrasity squad increased its preparations for the intersectional game here Saturday with Maryland.

Wilson, handicapped in recent weeks with a leg injury, took his place with the reserves in a scrimmage with the freshmen. His presence will bolster the Orange attack as the stocky sophomore rates high as a runner and passer.

Tigers Vote Full Share To Mickey Cochrane

Detroit, Oct. 4 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers voted a full share of the club's dividends from the World Series to Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane, who was deposed as their manager on August 6, it became known today.

Detroit finished fourth in the American League race to qualify for a minor cut of series receipts.

Attractive Passing Duel Looms In Cardinal-Detroit Game

By Jack Munhall.

One of the Midwest's outstanding forward passing duels of the season is expected at Detroit Friday night when Catholic University's Burke Vidnovic matches his lethal aerial bombs against the equally potent ones of Edward Palumbo, the Titans' triple-threat back.

Catholic scouts who watched the University of Detroit in action against Purdue and last week against Kalamazoo Teachers reported to Coach "Dutch" Bergman that the Titans' offense is built as completely around Palumbo's passing as it was around the fleet-running Andy Farkas last season.

Palumbo, who threw the pass that enabled Detroit to score a stunning upset over Duquesne last year, is touted as one of the greatest throwers in Detroit annals and already this season has been making life miserable for opposing secondaries. It was his passing that led to Detroit's touchdown against Purdue which was forced to push over three rapid touchdowns in the fourth quarter to defeat the Titans, 19-6, two weeks ago.

Last Saturday when the Titans, using second and third stringers the better part of the game, nipped Kalamazoo, 6-0, Palumbo's passing again was instrumental in the scoring.

Acting on these and other tips of his scouts, who reported Detroit's forward wall as unusually powerful, Coach Bergman has stressed pass offense and defense in recent practice and feels confident his Cardinals will avenge the 40-0 walloping given them last season by Detroit and the speedy Farkas.

Vidnovic, whose passes produced both touchdowns as Catholic opened its season last Sunday with a decisive 13-0 victory over dangerous St. Bonaventure's, has been in excellent form in drills this week and is set to lead his mates to a victory they covet very highly.

The Cards, coming through the rough Bonny battle with no serious injuries, will be strengthened for Friday's game by the return of John Fiorellino, dependable reserve quarterback. Fiorellino, out for about ten days with a bad shoulder, will be equipped with a special pad and held for immediate service. Pete Sachon, regular signal caller, is to start, but probably will need relief. He received a terrific physical beating in the Bonny game when he played practically the entire 60 minutes and he has not put on a uniform this week. His body is covered with ugly bruises and discolorations.

The Cards, about 33 strong, left eraly this morning by train for Detroit and will arrive there tomorrow. The squad will leave Detroit immediately after the game, arriving here late Saturday afternoon.

Two new faces will be in the George Washington backfield Friday night when the Colonials seek their second victory of the season in an intersectional game with Butler, at Griffith Stadium.

Frank Merka, 1937 regular who has been on the sidelines recovering from a summer illness, is fit and will replace Tom Grady at quarterback. The other newcomer will be Murphy Booth, a sophomore, who will supplant Stanford Carriers at right halfback, the blocking position in the Colonial backfield.

With Booth and Merka, whose specialty is bowling over enemy tacklers, starting together, Vic Sampson and Lud Urick, the Colonials' running threats should receive ample protection. Sampson will continue to call the plays from his position at left halfback.

Over at Georgetown, Coach Hagerty redoubled his efforts to prevent the sophomoric Hoya squad from entertaining illusions to its greatness following Saturday's 51-0 rout of a ridiculously weak Hampden-Sydney eleven. Armed with a flock of notes supplied by Line Coach "Mush" Dubofsky, Hagerty gave his players a man-to-man talk. And when he and the hard-boiled Dubofsky were finished pointing out missed assignments, faulty blocking and sloppy tackling evident Saturday, the youthful Hoyas were blushing red.

But their cockiness will receive no deflation Saturday because Roanoke College appears the victim in the second act of "Slaughter of the Innocents." The Virginians have won two games and tied one thus far this season. But look at who they beat: Newberry College, 13-7, and Lenoir Rhyne, 7-6. The 6-6 tie was with Catawba.

Maryland, recovering slowly from the shock of losing Jim Meade, continued preparations for Saturday's contest with Syracuse by brushing up their blocking, especially in the line, and tackling.

Coach Frank Dobson, none-too happy over two successive defeats, continued his rebuilding program, working on a new line-up which is to include 10 sophomores. Most promising back among these is little 150-pound Joe Murphy, a 10-second runner, who is to replace the injured Charlie Weidinger at quarterback.

Phillies Sign Doc Prothro

Will Manage Club Gets 3-Year Job Wants Power, Speed

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Gerald Nugent, president of the Philadelphia Phillies, tonight signed Dr. James Thompson (Doc) Prothro, of Memphis, to a 3-year contract as manager of the club. Prothro succeeds Jimmy Wilson, who resigned Saturday.

Prothro, who has held a manager's job in the Southern Association for nine years and resigned recently as the Little Rock pilot, said he would return to Philadelphia with Nugent after the World Series to confer on the club's 1939 prospects.

"The Phillies have some good pitchers," Prothro said, "but I want more power and want to add speed to the club."

The new Philly pilot managed Memphis in the Southern Association for five years, winning one pennant, then resigned four years ago to go to Little Rock where he won another flag.

Feldman-Quarles Go Hailed as Real Scrap

Fight at Arena Monday Should Be One of Best Feldman Took Disputed Tilt in 1936 Principals Are 'Hungry,' Must Produce

By Lewis F. Atchison.

It is no ordinary brawl coming up Monday night at the Arena between Norment Quarles and Lew Feldman—as Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn would have you know. It threatens to be one of the best of the year—indoors or out.

In the first place the boys fought a ten-round bout in 1936, and according to one of the better record pamphlets, both won. On one page the book gives Feldman the decision, and on the very next gives it to Quarles. Evidently the editor disagreed with the official verdict, developed a slight case of astigmatism compiling the book, or simply couldn't make up his mind.

Feldman, for your information, won the match, outpointing the former Southern Conference lightweight champion in a fast engagement. But Lew didn't win without a struggle, for the seemingly indefatiguable Quarles pushed him to the limit before dropping the duke. It was Quarles' inexperience rather than Felman's superiority that defeated him.

This, Goldie assures us, is sufficient to warrant the prediction of a good fight. Quarles wants to blot out that defeat and add to his reputation in this precinct. He wants to knock out Feldman, and get the promised shot at Tony Canzoneri or Lew Amebrs.

The second reason advanced by Ahearn in predicting a close bout is that the principals are "hungry" fighters, scrapping for actual living expenses and not merely trying to add to their financial fortunes. There was a time when both could look forward to retiring to a comfortable home with a tidy nestegg laid up as protection against the inevitable rainy day, but misfortune ovretook them.

Feldman ha da sizeable sum safely invested—he thought, in stocks and bonds, and Quarles owned a small furniture factory in North Carolina. But that dream vanished with tumbling markets, and both were wiped out. Hense, they can't afford to make bad fights in any arena, because they want to come back for additional engagements. They're fighting now to support families, for the necessities of life, and have to make good. One bad fight can ruin their chances of coming back to a club, and fewer clubs available, the less work, and the skimpier the income.

Ahearn last night said he was thinking about bringing back Petey Sarron for the winner, if Sarron is agreeable. Feldman whipped Sarron in 1934 at Madison Square Garden and was responsible for the Syrian's long absence from that ring. Law wants another bout with Sarron, who was never eager to meet Feldman, even socially, after obsorbing that shellacking.

Hartman Pressess Danowsky for Passing Honors

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Bill Hartman, former Georgia star now with the defending champion Washington Redskins, is giving veteran Ed Danowski, of the New York Giants, a stiff battle for forward-passing honors in the National Professional Football League.

Latest figures, including last night's Giants-Pittsburgh game, show Danowski with 25 completions in 40 attempts for an efficiency percentage of .625. Hartman, 18 of whose 29 tosses have hit their marks, is batting .620. followed by Jack Robbins and Dwight Sloan, formerly of Arkansas and now with the Chicago Cardinals.

Though he is the second best ground gainer in the league with a total of 192 yards, Pittsburgh's Whizzer White is far behind Max Krause, of Washington, in average per try. Krause tops the league with 206 yards in 21 attempts for an average of 9.8 to White's 2.7.

The leading scorers are Joe Carter, of the Philadelphia Eagles, and Don Hutson, of Gree Bay, 24 points each; Ward Cuff, of the Giants, and Bill Reissig, of Brooklyn, each has made good on two tries at field goals, and Gaynell Tinsley, of the Cardinals, leads the pass-catchers with 18.

Series

Hartnett himself will go behind the bat tomorrow with two fingers on his throwing hand raw and crying for surcease.

In contrast to six Yankees who finished the season hitting more than .300 and five Yankees who compiled more than 20 home runs each, the Cubs tomorrow will place on the field a team that boasts only one .300 — the former Nat, Carl Reynolds, who achieved an average of .302.

LoudounClub Continues Field Trials

Runs All-Age Stake D.C. Dog Outstanding Large Crowd Present

Round Hill, Va., Oct. 4.—The Loudoun Gun Dog Club continued its annual field trials today with the running of 20 braces in the all-age stake. Tw obraces in this event are left over for tomorrow. The weather was again ideal and the gallery of sportsmen large.

The judges, Mat Trimble and Leslie D. Cline, announced at the close of the day that four outstanding dogs in today's series will be called back for a second series tomorrow. These are Spartens Brake Rider, a white and liver pointer, belonging to R. Z. Cates, of Spartansburg, S. C.; Martez Bill, a white and liver pointer, belonging to E. E. Huffer, of Washington, D. C.; Shane Machree, white and black setter, owned by R. E. Dodd, of Mobile, Ala., and Sunnyside Rex, a white and black pointer, owned by W. S. Francis, of Hamilton, this county. These dogs hunted wide and found birds today, handling them in a beautiful manner.

Following the completion of the all-age, tomorrow, the members' shooting dog stake will be run. There are 25 entries in this event. The time of each brace has been reduced to 20 minutes.

British Curtis Cup Stars Eliminated

CANDID CAMERA "SHOOTS" SECRET WHISKEY SURVEY

Shows how 1,000 men made price trial—and (their average opinion) rated Old Quaker, now 3 years old, worth $1.00 more than actual price*

● Inquiring reporters went last month to 1,000 men—men in all walks of life—living in various parts of the nation. The object was to get 1,000 men's opinions regarding Old Quaker, now 3 years old.

RESULT: The average net opinion of these 1,000 men was this: 3-year Old Quaker rivals many fine whiskies that are much more expensive! And specifically, 3-year Old Quaker is worth $1.39 more per quart than its actual selling price.

We make the claim: Old Quaker at 3 years old has reached its Golden Age. Mature on every count—due to our special methods—ageing under scientifically controlled summer temperature and 51 times checked from grain to glass. For the straight enjoyment you get from Old Quaker, we believe, you would gladly pay more than the unusually low price asked for this 3-year-old whiskey.

We invite You to Try It

If what 1,000 men have said is true, we predict, every man who enjoys good whiskey will want to try Old Quaker 3-year-old. For in these men's opinion it offers you a clear-cut saving of at least a dollar a quart.

*Average price exactly $1.39 more a quart.

NOTE: Trials conducted by Market Research Corporation of America

Merle C. Steelman, Transportation Official, is $1.30 a quart over the retail price in rating Old Quaker Whiskey.

J. C. McWilliams, Accountant, appraises Old Quaker at $3.69 a quart. Investigator Anderson records his answer.

Wheat Dips As Corn Hits 5-Year Low

Drops 1⅜-1¾ Cents
Surplus Total Is Up
Unusual Crib Moves

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 5—Eclipsing of season low-price records formed the rule in nearly all grains today, with corn touching new bottom levels unreached before in five years. Wheat in Chicago fell 1⅜ cents a bushel maximum, and corn 1¾ cents.

Unusually large movement of old corn to market so as to make cribroom for the new harvest, served as a particular burden on corn values. Another notable unsettling influence was an estimate that the world carryover of surplus wheat into the 1939 season would achieve the huge total of 1,070,000,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅞@1¼ cents lower compared with yesterday's finish. December, 63¼@63⅜; May, 63⅞@63¾. Corn, 1⅜@1¾ down; December, 45¼@45½; May, 48⅛@49. Oats, ½@⅝ off. Rye showing ⅞ setback. Provisions, 5 to 12 cents drop.

Cotton Lower With Hedging

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Although cotton recovered from small early losses today, increased hedge selling toward the close erased the gains. December, which had advanced from 8.14 to 8.21, eased to 8.12 and closed at 8.13, with final prices 3 to 7 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 6 points lower owing to disappointing Liverpool cables and under moderate liquidation and Southern selling. Buyers were inclined to await developments in the South where spot prices on the average had gone above the loan level yesterday. When offerings by producers proved light, the market responded to a small volume of trade price fixing but there was no follow-up and late selling appeared through spot houses and brokers with co-operative connections.

B. & O. Carloadings Higher Last Month

Baltimore, Oct. 4.—Baltimore & Ohio carloadings for the week ended October 1, totaled 43,937. This was the greatest number of cars loaded in one week since the week ended November 13, 1937, when the total was 45,304. It also exceeded by 2,086 loads the total for the previous week.

During the corresponding week of 1937 total loads were 54,458, and for the same week of the year 1930 they were 66,496. The total carloadings for the month of September showed an increase of 8,644 over the previous month of August. The September total was 179,424, while the August total was 170,780.

Daily Oil Output Drops 16,913 Bbls.

Tulsa, Oct. 4 (AP).—A decrease of 16,913 barrels daily brought average crude oil production in the United States to 3,237,960 barrels daily during the week ending Oct. 1, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today.

Oklahoma increased 5,775 barrels daily to average 454,050. East Texas was unchanged at 369,000 and the State of Texas increased 11,849 to total 1,236,296. Louisiana decreased 4,800 to 260,590 daily. California declined 16,400 to a daily average of 660,750 and Kansas was off 1,750 to 159,375.

Philadelphia, Oct. 4. (AP).—A report of the census bureau survey of business, issued from the Philadelphia office today, stated that sale of paper and its products declined in the last half of 1937 and the first half of this year. The report was based on information furnished by 536 wholesale paper houses doing 35 per cent of the total business in 1935, the last year a regular business census was taken.

Between the fourth quarter of 1937 and the first quarter of this year, the business dropped 9.5 per cent, then declined ½ per cent in the second quarter.

Stocks Hold Day's Gains
President's Message Came Too Late
Nickel Plate a Features in Bonds

New York, Oct. 4.—Stocks held their gains today and thanks to an insignificant gain of a bare 0.01 point in the compilation of 100 representative stocks. This made it the seventh consecutive day that the market has gone forward. For all practical purposes, however, the list was at a standsill today. The opening was slightly lower, followed by a moderate recovery around noon.

Following a mild setback in the afternoon there was a good close. It was a point in favor of the bullish forces that trading expanded on the last rally. Volume for he day missed the million mark, amounting to 947,780 shares.

Profit-Taking Attracted

A long list of new highs in representative issues also was regarded as a favorable point, for the recovery since the calling of he four-power conference a week ago has put prices at a level where profit taking has its attractions. As was the case on the previous day, brokers with foreign connections reported foreign investors still interested in the long side of this market.

This fact was borne out by the action of sterling and the French franc. Weakness in these currencies early in the day showed that there is no rush to repatriate funds which were sent here over the last month or two for safe keeping.

Sterling Recovers

There was a recovery late in the day in sterling and the franc, both closing higher in dollar terms, but this was after official support. Cheering to the local investment fraternity is the fact that interest is centering more and more on our domestic business and political situation, instead of on Europe.

President's Interview

The press interview with President Roosevelt came too late in the day to affect prices but those in the financial district who read excerpts of the President's remarks were generally assured by their tone. That the Chief Executive is optimistic over the business and industrial outlook coincides very exactly with the majority opinion in the street, where it is felt the normal seasonal improvement was delayed by the threat of war. With this fear now removed, the belief is that undertakings of a wide variety which were held back will be resumed.

Stop Name-Calling

Probably the part of the President's message which received the greatest approval in the financial district was his advice that labor should cease its bickering and stop calling names. The practice of name-calling has been indulged in all too frequently in the last six years and those who have been fighting against the handicaps of a depression and governmental opposition in their efforts to keep honest business on a paying basis hope more than anyone that there may be a cessation of the rather sophomoric practice of coining derogatory phrases when speaking of one's opponents.

There was never any sound reason for official Washington to regard business in general as an opponent of the Government and one way to make co-operation easier would be for Washington and business, as well as labor, to stop bickering and name-calling. All should be glad to accept Presidential advice on this matter.

There was more than the ordinary amount of interest today in shares of building companies. Flintkote, Celotex, Lone Star Cement and National Gypsum scoring new highs. Most active stock of the day was Greyhound, up to a point, while the aviation division was led by Sperry, also up a point. General Motors, off a fraction, stood out in the motor division.

Commodity traders who followed the course of wheat and corn were interested in the President's afternoon press interview, in which he expressed a feeling that prices of certain commodities, notably wheat and cotton, were too low. For they recalled the pledge of higher prices for farm products, in the "raise them we will," speech. In today's trading corn reached a new low for the last five years. It closed off 1⅝ to 1¾ cents a bushel while wheat was down ⅞ to 1⅛. Cotton was quiet and off 3 to 7 points.

Bond Prices Are Firmer

Firmer prices prevailed for domestic bonds on the big board today with trading in slightly smaller volume than in the preceding session. Treasurys shared in the gains, almost the entire list being above the previous close. Foreign obligations were mixed.

Second grade rails made the best showing in the general list, the average of five representative issues being up 1.24 points at the close. Ten other rails sold up 0.12 points on the average and ten industrials advanced 0.18 points. The average of five utilities at the close was down 0.36 points.

Nickel Plate Advances

In the rail section much attention again centered in the Nickel Plate group where, despite the recent failure to meet interest on two issues and no payment of maturity on another, there were gains of 1½ to 8¾ points. The 6s of '38, the matured issue, were the biggest gainer.

Baltimore & Ohio bonds were a relatively weak section along with Southern Railway and some of the Southern Pacifics. Good spots included some of the Illinois Centrals and Louisville & Nashville issues.

German bonds sold off as much as 3 points, and Italians were easier. Czech 8s of '51 improved in small turnover. Many of the South American issues improved.

U. S. Recovery Gains in Face Of War Fears

Steel Placed at 52%
Advances Continue
Building Holds

New York, Oct. 4.—The domestic business situation has been overshadowed in recent weeks by European developments, but despite the damper which war uncertainties have placed on business planning, recovery in this country has made moderate further progress, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York.

In contrast to the situation a year ago, when business activity was declining, a steady month-by-month advance has been scored from the spring low of 66.9 on the Standard Statistics Co. industrial production index to a September figure estimated at 76. A moderate further gain to 80 is tentatively projected for October, narrowing the rate of decline from last year to about 9 per cent.

Steel activity in October is forecast at 52 per cent of capacity, against 45 per cent last month and 76.5 per cent in September, 1937. Automobile production is expected to total 240,000 cars in October, more than double the 115,000 cars of last month and the highest figure so far this year.

Building contract awards in October are expected to be about the same as in September, in marked contrast to last year's experience, when October totals fell off 25 per cent from September. Electric power demand will probably continue its advance of the past few months to the highest total so far in 1938.

On October 1, 1937, there were 1,253 issues totaling 1,398,144,806 shares with a market value of $49,034,032,639.

Room Hunters About
Your Vacant Room

Are you waiting for room hunters to see your room? You'll never find tenants if you don't tell them what you have to offer. Every morning room hunters first scan the classified pages of The Post looking for suitable rooms. Your room may be just the one that they are seeking. Why not tell them what you have to offer? Every day that your room is vacant costs you money—much more than it would cost to list that room in The Post's classified section. A 2-line ad in The Post costs only 38 cents. Call NAtional 4200 now and let a Post ad-writer help you phrase your ad.

New Issues To Total Over $300,000,000

June Highest So Far 'Right Market' Needed January Is Smallest

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 4.—A fall wave of new corporate financing that may lift public bond offerings this month to well over $300,000,000 "if the markets are right," was reported in sight today by security underwriting houses in Wall street.

Last month, due to depressing prices and financial sentiment by the European war scare, only $73,645,000 of new bonds were put on the market, excluding United States Treasury offerings. This compared with $216,473,000 in August and was the smallest since last January's $67,715,000.

If October offerings top $300,000,000, it will mark only the second month this year in which that figure has been exceeded. The other "better than $300,000,000 month" was June, when sale of $100,000,000 of United States Steel Corporation debentures helped swell the total.

Due this week, underwriters say, is the $42,000,000 of bonds of Michigan Consolidated Gas Co.

Other corporate issues that may be put on sale this month include $80,000,000 Public Service of Northern Illinois and $55,000,000 Ohio Power bonds. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. is reported preparing a registration statement for $50,000,000 of new debentures. An issue of $25,000,000 of Republic of Argentina loans may hit the market, too, it is reported.

Pullman Company Nets $179,224

Chicago, Oct. 4. (AP)—Transportation operations of the Pullman Company, Sleeping Car Company affiliate of Pullman, Inc., for August resulted in a net profit after reserve of $179,224 compared with $317,216 in August, 1937, the company reported today.

For the first eight months net after reserve was $137,360 compared with $3,375,518 in the corresponding 1937 period.

The run totaled 19,000 head, which was larger than expected but not quite as big as a week ago. A reduced run of cattle caused prices for strictly good, choice and prime kinds to rise 15 cents in some cases. Fat lambs also were steady to strong and the early top for natives was 8.40.

Bob Burns Says—

This is the greatest country in the world for automobiles. I heard one fella say that his house leaked so bad that when it rained, the family goes out and sleeps in the limousine. I heard another fella told his boy to take the car in and fill her up and if he had any money left, get a loaf of bread.

Last summer I was going through a little town in the Middle West, and I stopped in a bank to cash a check for $10. The banker says, "I know the check is good, but there ain't that much money in the bank, but I'll take you over to the gasoline station and introduce you to the fella who has money."
